No Bonus, President Hints to Veterans

OUTLINES VIEWS IN ADDRESS AT NEW HOSPITAL

Program to Aid All Needy Described.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt, speaking at the dedication of a new $1,700,000 veterans' hospital here this afternoon, served notice on the nation at large and the forthcoming American Legion convention at Miami in particular that he is unalterably opposed to the immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus.

The President revealed his position on the controversial question by indirection, without mention of the word "bonus," but he reminded the veterans of the world war that, as a class, they are "better off from the point of view of unemployment and of annual income than the average of any other great group of our citizens."

Another Fight Foreshadowed.

The President's address on this occasion was awaited with great interest by the Legionnaires, who go into their convention at Miami next week, and by the radical veterans' bloc in congress, headed by Congressman Wright Patman, big "pay the bonus now" man from Texas. Mr. Roosevelt's speech thus foreshadowed another fight in congress with the extremists who would start the printing presses and pay the veterans in greenbacks, if necessary, a fight which may excel the overriding of the President's economy act veto in the last session.

Some 25,000 persons stood on the hospital grounds before the portico from which the President, facing a setting sun over the Blue Ridge mountains, spoke. Mr. Roosevelt was presented by Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia.

A guard of honor was supplied by cadets from the Virginia Military institute, and the band of the Virginia Polytechnic institute furnished the music.

Speaks at New Hospital.

The President spoke of the palatial new hospital here, with 16 buildings and accommodations for 472 patients, as a symbol of what the government is trying to do not only for the veterans but for the "hundreds of thousands of other citizens—men, women and children who, handicapped by environment or by circumstance, lack today what reasonable people call the essentials of modern civilization."

He assured the disabled and sick veterans that they would receive the best medical and surgical treatment that modern science could offer, but reminded the ex-soldiers as a class that they have no peculiar claims upon the government.

Refers to Slum Conditions.

"Most of us know in general terms," he said, "of the slum conditions which exist in many of our cities. Most of us know, from hearsay at least, of people who have lived for generations in back eddies remote from the active stream of life. But we have failed to realize the existence of the underprivileged who are at present largely forgotten in practically every one of the more than 3,000 counties of the 48 states of the Union."

Not only did Mr. Roosevelt urge upon the veterans the responsibility of the government to other classes of citizens with greater claims for assistance; he reminded them that in the spending of money there must be due regard for the credit of the United States.

Cost About 2 Billion.

Immediate payment of the adjusted compensation certificates would cost about 2 billion dollars. A total of 3 billion 500 million dollars' worth was issued to some four million veterans, of which some 1 billion 500 million has been borrowed by 2,300,000 veterans. The economy act of 1933 reduced total annual veterans' payments by 410 million dollars, but a total of 210 million was later restored, $72,000,000 by executive order and 138 million dollars by congress, over the President's veto.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs who accompanied the President from Washington and spoke at the dedication ceremony, said this new hospital was the 78th institution provided by the government for its veterans of foreign wars, at total cost of 127 million dollars. These homes and hospitals, he said, are now housing and caring for 49,000 veterans.

Besides Gen. and Mrs. Hines, the

Louis Johnson, who gave his address as the Red Mill tavern, 25 South Ashland boulevard, won the amateur liquor tasting championship of Chicago yesterday at trials conducted during the closing day of the Wine, Liquor and Beer world's fair at the Hotel Sherman.

Vying with 14 other winners of preliminary contests held in various saloons about the city, Johnson was made champion when he named 10 of 17 liquors tasted from unlabeled bottles.

The liquors in the test ranged from masculine bourbon to delicate Moselle, and by the time some of the contestants finished their 17 drinks they were unable to recall which ones they had identified. Johnson was awarded a chromium bar.

PARENTS GONE, BOYS TAKEN TO JUVENILE HOME

Billy and Jackie Pestle were taken to the Juvenile home last night because their father and mother couldn't get along. Billy is 4 years old and Jackie is 3.

The boys lived with their parents at 1314 East 62d street, a rooming house owned by Harry Kalisky. Three weeks ago the mother, Lucille, left after a quarrel with her husband, John. She went to Harvard, Ill.

John, a war veteran, cared for the boys after that. Last night Kalisky appeared at the Woodlawn police station with Jackie and Billy, saying their father had also disappeared.

Hospital Inmate Is Seized as 'Peeper' in Lake Forest

Lake Forest policemen hurried to the Onwentsia club last night after being informed that a man was peeping into windows of buildings on the club grounds, and arrested Carl C. Teeter, an escaped inmate of the Veterans' Bureau hospital in North Chicago. Previously Teeter was said by police to have frightened the household of Albert D. Farwell, 835 West Deerpath road, former mayor of Lake Forest. Teeter had been sent to the hospital to be treated for mental disorder.

Says Politics Blocks Relief Graft Inquiry

Boston, Mass., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Confident that President Roosevelt is being betrayed in Massachusetts, not by obstructionist opponents but by some of his most vociferous supporters, who are using the ERA to further their own ends, members of the federal grand jury now investigating Emergency Relief administration frauds in Lowell have decided to invite the public to furnish them with leads on ERA waste and graft.

George Anderson, former Plymouth selectman and foreman of the jury, declared tonight that he would use his powers to subpena witnesses and records to the fullest if the citizens of Massachusetts would coöperate by forwarding information of instances of favoritism and corruption.

Politics Thicker than Water.

Although confident that the United States district attorney's office is ready to prosecute offenders, he is convinced that "politics is thicker than water."

"We are 21 men—laymen in the law"—Foreman Anderson said, "who until a few days ago were employed largely to rubber stamp the evidence presented to us by the United States attorney at Boston. We understood that we were supposed to consider the evidence ourselves and not to discuss it with strangers. I know that I shall be criticized for now inviting the citizens of Massachusetts, of whom we are but 21, to assist us in ferreting out cases of maladministration of the ERA.

"My reason for inviting the public to coöperate is that the grand jury will terminate its activities early in December and that the next grand jury may not have the same attitude we have.

Only Two Months to Work.

"We have less than two months to get at the bottom of what we know to be an ugly mess. We are pressed for time, and we mean to use our powers to subpena witnesses and records if the citizens will supply us with the leads. We beg of the public, therefore, not to hinder or obstruct us with false alarms or tips which will lead to nothing more than personal grudges and petty cases of misjudgment not punishable by law.

"So far as the political angles of the case are concerned, I voted for President Roosevelt, subscribe to his policies, and still believe that he is well-intentioned. The tragedy of the ERA is the fact that he is being betrayed, not by obstructionist opponents but by his own followers, many of whom are misusing the ERA in this state to further their own ends.

"If we can obtain the evidence we will indict any and all malefactors.

Aroused by Lack of Coöperation.

"Our ire has been aroused at a lack of coöperation from some investigators and subordinate officials at the state ERA headquarters. Too often persons who seemed willing enough to help us in the morning showed definite signs of change of heart after lunch, and hedged testimony with enough doubts to make it impossible for us to 'go through.'

"Several incidents have occurred to indicate the extremes to which influential politicians are willing to go to block us. So far we have returned four indictments which I will not discuss. I will say, however, that I was approached in such a way as to cause me to believe that a person meant to discuss bribes with me, starting at a $2,000 figure. I shut him off rather brusquely in order to avoid the unpleasant necessity of listening to an offer which I would have to report to the United States attorney.

"In the same way my temper was aroused last Saturday night when two sleek strangers visited my soda fountain and, when we were alone, casually mentioned the fact that I might find it unhealthy to investigate ERA matters in Suffolk county. They spoke in a humorous offhand manner, mentioning noisy milk wagons which pass a man's place of business before he is found riddled with bullets. I chose to think that they were kidding me. We 21 men on the federal grand jury mean to do our duty as we see it."

Robert Southall, 28 years old, 5615 Fulton street, will get a college education as the largest "tip" received by the pushers of the 493 roller chairs and 67 jinrikishas at the World's Fair.

Whitney Elias, vice president of the Daggett Roller Chair company, which operates the concession, told of the fabulous tip. The giver, he said, was a wealthy Boston widow who early in August engaged Southall's roller chair. She retained Southall for twenty days, during which she learned that his college career had been halted by lack of funds, Elias said.

When she returned to Boston she took Southall as her chauffeur, and promised to finance him through the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, according to Elias. Southall now is taking an electrical engineering course there.

LINDY SUSPECT JAILED PENDING MURDER TRIAL

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 19. — [Special.] — Bruno Hauptmann was hustled under heavy guard from the Bronx county jail tonight and sped in the midst of an automobile caravan to Flemington, N. J., where he is to stand trial within two or three weeks for the murder of the Lindbergh baby. He arrived at the Hunterdon county jail at 10:20.

The last legal obstacle to the murder trial was removed this evening when the Appellate division of the New York Supreme court affirmed the refusal of Supreme Judge Ernest L. Hammer to grant a writ of habeas corpus to the German alien.

The five judges of the Appellate division unanimously decided that there was no merit in Hauptmann's appeal against extradition from New York.

Arguments Are Debated.

Presiding Justice Edward R. Finch delivered the opinion of the appeals division after he and his colleagues had debated for an hour and one-half the arguments put forward by Hauptmann's attorney, James M. Fawcett, and Attorney General David T. Wilentz, representing New Jersey.

When he heard the decision, which included a refusal to consider new evidence proffered by Defense Attorney Fawcett, the latter announced that he would not seek to prolong the extradition fight.

"I will not appeal further," said Attorney Fawcett. "The fight now goes to the New Jersey courts on the murder case itself. I am confident that Hauptmann will be found innocent."

Hauptmann Rushed Away.

New Jersey officials and police obtained a certified copy of the Appellate division's opinion and hurried to the Bronx county jail, where Hauptmann has been confined since his arrest six weeks ago. The prisoner, manacled, was delivered up to them, and they rushed him into an automobile.

Through the streets of Manhattan, under the Hudson river via the Holland tubes and at a 60 miles an hour pace along the highways of New Jersey, went the stream of automobiles carrying the accused Lindbergh kidnaper and his guards. At Flemington cell No. 1 in the new jail awaited him. Hauptmann, as always, was morose and silent.

The murder trial is expected to start about Nov. 15.

Offers New Evidence.

The appeal proceedings in the stained glass atmosphere of the Appellate division were comparatively short. Attorney Fawcett presented his petition for a reversal of the lower court's decision in a perfunctory manner. He gambled all his chances on a plea that new evidence from two witnesses be admitted.

He was permitted to read an affidavit by Joseph M. Furcht, former construction superintendent at the Majestic apartments, although the affidavit was not officially admitted into evidence. The affidavit set forth that Hauptmann had worked on the apartment building from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. on March 1, 1932, the day of the kidnaping.

He also read another affidavit from E. C. Pescia, head of an employment agency, which stated that Hauptmann applied for work on Feb. 27, 1932, and was sent to the apartment job.

Calls Alibi Perfect.

Hauptmann's alibi was a perfect one, his attorney argued. He scouted the worth of the testimony of the handwriting expert who said Hauptmann wrote all the ransom notes.

"Even if Hauptmann did write them," the attorney pleaded, "that does not prove that he was in New Jersey. The state of New Jersey must place him in that state on March 1, 1932. The indictment charges him with murder on that date and there is no direct testimony placing him in a position to have committed that murder.

"And Hauptmann himself denied on the witness stand that he wrote the notes or was in New Jersey at the time of the crime," the attorney concluded.

Attorney General Wilentz pointed out that the burden of proof in an extradition proceeding was upon the defendant.

"The very issuance of an extradition warant sets up the presumption that Hauptmann was in New Jersey at the time of the kidnaping," he said.

"However, I think we have proved that Hauptmann was in a position to have committed the crime. His own denial that he was there does not mean much. His record is that of an alien who entered the country illegally and who has the record in Germany of a convicted criminal who has served in prison."

20 Planes Off for Australia from England

BULLETIN.

CROYDON, Eng., Oct. 20 (Saturday).—(AP)—Capt. T. Neville Stack, flying in the London-Melbourne air derby, was forced down at 8:35 a. m. at Abbeville, France, by bad weather.

BY JOHN STEELE.

LONDON, Oct. 20 [Saturday].—Twenty of the world's fastest airplanes took off at dawn today from the Mildenhall airdrome, Suffolk, on the greatest air race in history—an 11,323 mile flight over jungle, mountain, desert, and sea to Melbourne, Australia. Counting pilots, co-pilots, radio operators, and passengers there are 47 persons in the race.

The flyers are competing for a pot of gold consisting of $77,500 in prizes. It is offered by Sir MacPherson Robertson, Melbourne candy magnate, in conjunction with the centenary celebration touched off Thursday in the state of Victoria by the duke of Gloucester, third son of King George.

Thousands of spectators were on hand at 6:30 a. m. when the speedy De Haviland Comet, piloted by Capt. James Mollison and his wife, Amy Johnson Mollison, took off to start the great adventure.

Two minutes later Col. Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn, one of the three American teams, skimmed across the airdrome in a Boeing transport plane.

Other U. S. Entries.

Shortly thereafter the two other entries from the United States, a monoplane piloted by Miss Jacqueline Cochran and Wesley Smith, and a monocoupe piloted by John H. Wright and John Polando, were winging their way toward Australia.

Cathcart Jones, his engine missing, taxied away, but was forced to return to the starting point. Later he made a perfect takeoff.

G. J. Geysendorfer, the competitor from the Netherlands, took off, followed closely by C. W. A. Scott. By 6:48 all of the 20 planes had taken the air.

It is anticipated the fastest plane will reach Melbourne about Tuesday.

A sensation was caused tonight when the Royal Aero club refused to allow the American built Bellanca monoplane, entered by the Irish Free State, to compete on the ground that it was overweight.

Col. James Fitzmaurice and E. W. Bonar, the plane's pilots, appealed in vain against the decision. Later, Fitzmaurice prepared to make the flight anyway.

King Doesn't Care to Go.

King George, Queen Mary, and the prince of Wales unexpectedly visited the airdrome yesterday to wish the flyers Godspeed. The queen requested Mrs. Mollison to give a message to the duke of Gloucester.

Mrs. Mollison laughingly asked the king if he would care to go along.

"I'm afraid I'm getting a little beyond a flight of that kind," King George replied, shaking his head.

The prince of Wales spent yesterday afternoon watching an exhibition of "crazy flying" by the American Wright. The two chatted before Wright began his exhibition. The prince remarked he had heard a good deal of Wright and would like to see him in the air.

"Sure," replied the aviator, "but if I break some regulations here you will have to give me absolution."

KIDNAPER FOILS PURSUERS; BARE MENTAL RECORD

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Authorities engaged in a country-wide pursuit of Thomas H. Robinson Jr., kidnaper of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, were confronted tonight by a maze of reports that the fugitive or some of the $50,000 ransom he collected had turned up in many sections of the nation.

Despite the immediate investigation of every "tip," the kidnaper kept ahead of the net spread by federal agents working under Melvin H. Purvis.

The most promising clew came from Pennsylvania, where Robinson was reported seen, but authorities there were unable to locate the man discribed as closely resembling the fugitive.

Further evidence of the former college student's dangerous mental condition was disclosed here by Dr. E. W. Cocke, Tennessee commissioner of institutions. He was superintendent of the Western State Hospital for the Insane, one of the two institutions in which Robinson was an inmate, at the time the kidnaper was there.

Predicted End in Prison.

Dr. Cocke revealed that Robinson had been liberated from the insane asylum four years ago despite the official opinion that the former inmate was a menace to society who in all probability would end up in a penitentiary.

However, Dr. Cocke said he was confident that Robinson was not insane when discharged from the Western State hospital Aug. 24, 1930, and that "most assuredly he knows right from wrong."

"In view of the fact that our diagnosis was psychopathic personality and not insanity," he said, "it was our duty to discharge him, regardless of whether he would continue to be a law violator."

Robinson was sent to the Central State hospital in June, 1929, after diagnosticians had pronounced him a demetia precox patient following his arrest for executing jewel robberies in which he used fake search warants to enter private homes.

Sent Back to Institution.

Eleven months later he was released and turned over to his family, but was later found to be still uncured and was sent to the Western State hospital.

"The parents of the boy visited him several times during his stay at the hospital," said Dr. Cocke, "and on almost every occasion of their visits he would insist on being permitted to return home. The facts concerning him were related in detail to his parents and we insisted that he be kept in the institution for an indefinite period.

"On the date of his discharge I prepared a statement covering this case in detail as to symptoms, prognosis and our prophecy as to the future of this boy. I even incorporated into this statement my opinion that he would always be a menace to society and that in all probability he would ultimately be sent to the penitentiary.

"Notwithstanding our opinion of the case, Thomas Robinson Sr., father of the boy, signed this statement and assumed all responsibility for his discharge and his future acts."

Grand Jury Called.

While the hunt for his son was being pressed with renewed intensity on every report of a clew, the elder Robinson, Nashville contractor who is charged with complicity in the crime, sat on his front porch and awaited news of developments in the case. He is free on bond of $25,000.

In Louisville, where the kidnaper's wife, Frances, is being held in default of $50,000 bond, preparations were being made for impaneling a grand jury in federal District court tomorrow to investigate the case. Both she and her father-in-law say they were on the government's side in handling the ransom money to effect the release of Mrs. Stoll.

It was reported two of the ransom bills had been found in Tennessee and that others turned up in Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio.

From as far west as Leavenworth, Kas., came reports that Robinson himself had been seen, while Delaware police pursued a car believed to contain him. Los Angeles justice officials also received word the fugitive may be headed there.

KIDNAPER REPORTED HERE

Reports that Thomas H. Robinson Jr., hunted as the kidnaper of Mrs. Alice Stoll of Louisville, Ky., was seen in Chicago yesterday morning were being investigated by the police and federal authorities.

James Alexander, colored, 226 East 56th street, reported that he saw a man who resembled Robinson in an automobile carrying Indiana license plates, near Leland avenue and Beacon street. Alexander said another man and a blonde woman wearing a green coat also were in the car.

Another report was received at the detective bureau yesterday afternoon from East Chicago, Ind., that a man who resembled the fugitive was seen driving a green sedan.

Officials also were investigating the report of a gas station attendant at Touhy and Western avenues that a man who resembled Robinson drove up to the station in a Ford V-8 yesterday morning.

MEXICAN HOUSE VOTES TO OUST CATHOLIC BISHOPS

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 19.—(AP)—The chamber of deputies unanimously voted tonight to request President Abelardo Rodriguez to expel all Catholic bishops and archbishops from Mexico as a step "toward solving the Catholic question permanently." Several speakers, in a stormy session in which Catholics were charged with supporting current agitation against the government's plan for socialistic education, urged the creation of an atheistic state by abolishing all religion.

A comparatively small number of high officials of the Catholic church remain in Mexico, a number having left the country at the height of the anti-church movement several years ago.

The senate tonight approved the constitutional reform to make socialistic education compulsory. The measure now will be sent to the twenty-nine state legislatures. The approval of two-thirds is necessary to make it effective.

New Train Reaches Coast from Omaha in 34 Hours

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Running three minutes ahead of schedule the Union Pacific's new streamlined train sped into the East Los Angeles station at 3:42 p. m., completing the run from Omaha in 33 hours and 42 minutes. W. A. Harriman, president of the board; President Carl Gray, and other officers of the road were aboard. The train will leave Monday in an effort to beat the existing transcontinental railroad speed record of 72 hours set in 1906 by the crack train of Harriman's father, the late Edward H. Harriman. Officials believe the New York run will require less than 60 hours.

5 BALKAN STATES WARN EUROPE IS CLOSE TO A WAR

Demand Terrorism and Intrigue End.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Oct. 19.—In language which had only a thin diplomatic sugar coating, the permanent councils of both the little entente—Rumania, Jugo-Slavia and Czechoslovakia—and the Balkan entente—Greece, Jugo-Slavia, Rumania and Turkey—issued identical communiques tonight asserting their solidarity with Jugo-Slavia and laying responsibility for King Alexander's assassination upon terrorists urged on by the foreign policies of nations which were not named but which clearly are indicated to be Hungary and Italy.

Both the little entente and Balkan entente, however, confined their action to a mere statement of facts and no note of protest was sent.

See War "Just Around Corner."

The communiques of each alliance said that war is just around the corner in Europe unless "international measures are loyally adopted" to stop political assassination and conspiracy.

Following the meetings of the two councils, the foreign ministers of all the countries represented called on King Carol of Rumania and Prince Paul, head of the Jugo-Slavia regency, and announced their deliberations.

It is considered significant that no note of protest has been sent to Hungary. The Jugo-Slav government, however, may do this on its own and it was said here tonight that the whole affair may be laid before the league of nations in November with the object of adopting measures to clear political conspiracy out of the Balkans.

Both the Balkan and little ententes also decided to adopt common measures against all conspirators and political agitators. As the first outcome of this decision, the Turks arrested the Macedonian terrorist leader, Mikailovitz, who fled from Bulgaria a month ago and who had been given Turkish hospitality.

Tonight's communiques said the common grief over Alexander's death only tightens the bonds which unites the successor states, which now form the little entente, and that efforts will be redoubled to carry out Alexander's policies of Balkan coöperation and rapprochement.

Hungarian Premier Denies Guilt.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Premier Julius Goemboes said today before his departure for Poland that Hungary "is entirely guiltless of any connection with the foul crime" of King Alexander's assassination.

"We can prove we never harbored the king's murderer or any other assassin," he said, "and the idea of Jugo-Slavia serving an ultimatum on us is too puerile to discuss. Jugo-Slavia has a good reason to remember it was an ultimatum served on old Serbia that provoked the world war. Surely she does not wish to set Europe on fire again."

Report Troop Concentration.

Mrs. Whitney May Not Testify in Gloria Vanderbilt Case

New York, Oct. 19. — [Special.] — When the Vanderbilt-Whitney case reached the point today where Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney was to take the stand in the Supreme court as final witness to testify to the unfitness of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt to bring up her 10 year old daughter the case was adjourned until Monday by agreement of opposing counsel.

It was learned that Mrs. Whitney, who was absent, was suffering from nervous strain and hopes for a settlement which will make it unnecessary for her to take the stand.

The settlement to be considered over the week-end, reports that Mrs. Whitney's side will close without her testimony and will make no further effort to oppose Mrs. Vanderbilt's pending application for a writ of habeas corpus, declaring her legal right to the custody of her child.

Asked to Cancel Application.

In return, Mrs. Vanderbilt will be asked to withdraw an application which she already has made in the Surrogate's court to be appointed custodian of the child's $2,800,000 estate in the place of existing trustees.

It is proposed, if these two court proceedings can be made to cancel out, to continue hereafter the situation which has obtained during the last two years—the child living with Mrs. Whitney, her aunt, while her mother draws a yearly allowance of $48,000 from the child's estate, which has been admittedly her only source of income.

This settlement has been suggested to the Vanderbilt side on the ground that Mrs. Vanderbilt would find it less advantageous, so far as her allowance is concerned, to be custodian of the child's estate, than to leave it in the custody of George W. Wickersham and Thomas B. Gilchrist, as it has been since Reginald Vanderbilt died in 1925, when his wife, at the age of 20, could not assume property guardianship.

Would Require Bond.

Even though she is the child's mother, the Surrogate's court would find it necessary to require a bond from her and would not permit her to draw upon the child's annual income of $120,000 except through checks countersigned by the bondsman. It has been brought to Mrs. Vanderbilt's attention that a bondsman would hardly be willing to take the responsibility for such a liberal allowance for the support of the child's mother as authorized so far by Mr. Wickersham and Mr. Gilchrist; and further, that the Surrogate's court would necessarily be more critical of the administration of the estate by a mother who would inherit it if the child died.

The bearing of the property action in the Surrogate's court on the personal action in the Supreme court has been emphasized by the length of time spent in questioning Thomas B. Gilchrist and examining the expenditures of the property guardians. He occupied the stand in the Supreme court all today and finished after taking four days.

Favors Clearing Her Name.

Justice John F. Carew, who is hearing the case, however, was understood to be in favor of some settlement which would permit Mrs. Vanderbilt to emerge from his court cleared of the reflections on her character which were made by Mrs. Whitney's witnesses.

Nathan Burkan, attorney for Mrs. Vanderbilt, said tonight he still was disposed to the belief that no basis for a settlement existed.

This was said to set an all-time record for the trip. Mrs. Howard flew a plane built by her husband, Benny Howard, plane designer, and pilot for the United Air Lines.

HITLER SUMMONS AIDS AS CHURCH CONFLICT GROWS

Will Map Policy Today to Deal with Crisis.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

BERLIN, Oct. 19.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler today ordered Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller, August Jaeger, commissioner of the Protestant church in Prussia, Hans Kinder, leader of the Nazi German Christians, and Rudolf Hess, deputy Nazi party leader, to appear before him tomorrow. The meeting was called to consider what the government's policy shall be in dealing with the conflict within the Protestant church.

Hitler's announcement caused opposition clergymen and laymen, who met in Berlin today, to postpone their decision to sign a "declaration of independence." They were scheduled to flatly repudiate Reichsbishop Mueller and all his works. The conference of the so-called national free synod of the oppositionists opened in the parish of the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, wartime submarine commander and militant leader of the pastors who oppose the dictatorial Nazi church régime.

Warning to Pastors.

The conference began with a sermon by Pastor Roericht, who warned the pastors as follows:

"In recent months we Christians relied too much on man. We, therefore, were chastized by God. We only must listen to His word.

Supt. Koch of Oeynhausen, who is presiding over the synod, had invited members of the GSP [secret police] as well as the official of the ministry of interior in charge of church matters to attend. Neither the secret police nor the Nazi official were present.

While the opposition churchmen were in session, leaders of the German Christians met with their church ministry. Capt. Preffer, Nazi party delegate, ordered Jaeger to withdraw his orders dismissing four members of the church cabinet. He also requested these men to withdraw their resignations.

Ex-Wife Accuses Jaeger.

Jaeger is in a delicate position. His divorced wife has circulated leaflets in Wuerttemberg which purport to expose the private life of this actual master of the Protestant church in Germany. The governor of Wuerttemberg tonight ordered the arrest of the persons who signed, published, and circulated the derogatory leaflets.

The governor also announced Jaeger had fought courageously in the front line trenches during the world war. He added that the Prussian church commissioner was not divorced because of adultery on his part, but because the marriage in general was a failure "due to his wife's mental derangement."

CLEANING UP DEBRIS IN WAKE OF RAIN IN LOS ANGELES REGION

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Storm clouds gave way to sunshine today as more than 500 workers began removing thousands of tons of débris, rock and sand scattered about the Los Angeles area in a two day torrential downpour.

The task of cleaning up Long Beach, where a lowlands residential district was inundated by four feet of water, may take a month. Scores of persons in this district, covering almost six square blocks, were still homeless tonight, but the water had receded rapidly.

More than 150 state Emergency Relief administration workers started clearing away débris in the foothills city of Montrose. Other workers were sent to Pasadena, South Pasadena, Glendale and Burbank.

Although six traffic deaths were attributed to the storm, which made streets slippery and highways hazardous, only one person, 9 year old Donald Butterworth, was a direct victim. The boy was swept into a storm drain and drowned.

KILLS SELF WITH GAS.

Saville J. Hayzen, 48 years old, 19 East 105th street, committed suicide yesterday by inhaling gas in an office of the Williamson Heater company, 525 East 103d street, of which he was midwestern manager. The police were told he had been ill.

$50,000 RANSOM PAID HUMPHREYS, SAYS UNION CHIEF

Steve Sumner, 34 year old treasurer and business manager of the Milk Wagon Drivers' union, testified under oath yesterday that he paid $50,000 ransom to Murray Humphreys of the Capone gang for the release of Robert G. Fitchie, president of Sumner's union, who was kidnaped in December, 1931.

The testimony of the veteran union leader was given before Master in Chancery George E. Q. Johnson, to whom Federal Judge John P. Barnes had referred an application for an injunction against the Milk Wagon Drivers' union.

Humphreys is now being sought by federal agents on a charge of evading income tax payments.

At yesterday's hearing, held in the United States courthouse, Sumner said that shortly after Fitchie was kidnaped he received a telephone call and recognized the voice as that of Humphreys.

He was to place the $50,000 on the rear seat of an automobile, which was to be parked in Ashland avenue near Harrison street.

"I left the money there," Sumner said, "and then hid close by to see what happened. The men who came to get it were Murray Humphreys and George [Red] Barker."

Girl, 20, Found Beaten to Death; Two Are Held

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Lota Canaday, 20, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Canaday, was found beaten to death today near Greenwood, Fla. The body was partly submerged in a pond. Claude Neal, Negro, and his aunt, Sallie Smith, are held.

BAIL HEARING FOR TABER AND KEHOE SET NEXT WEEK

Petitions were filed yesterday by Attorney Michael Ahern asking the release on bail of William Taber and Joseph J. Kehoe, officials of the street car men's union who are under indictment in connection with two murders growing out of the strike called against the Chicago Motor Coach company on Aug. 16. Final action on the petitions was postponed until next week.

Taber and Kehoe surrendered to the state's attorney's office Thursday night. Assistant State's Attorney Brown objected yesterday to the early hearing on the bail petition, asking more time in which to prepare to oppose the granting of bail.

Chief Justice Denis E. Sullivan heard part of the petition yesterday and then continued the hearing till Monday. Attorney Ahern said if the accussed men are required to prove their right to bail he will subpena all the state's witnesses.

The body of Walter Penar, a striking bus driver, was found in the lake yesterday at 52nd street. He had lived at 4248 West End avenue in the home of Ralph Stoltzmann, president of the striking union, local 1022, and who was subsequently indicted in connection with the two bus strike deaths. Penar's death, however, had nothing to do with the strike, according to police. An inquest will be held today.

To all appearances that's the impression this mohair and wool fleece topcoat makes on every man who sets eyes on it. It is a coat with all the earmarks of something expensive. The softness and warmth-without-weight quality of the fabric, for example, are something you don't come across except in a coat of very fine camel's hair. The spacious welt edge pockets, the fullness of its cut and the manner in which it is finished are details you suspect of being the work of tailors with custom shop training.

CHARGE INSULL PROFIT ON SALE TO OWN TRUSTS

Securities Priced Above Market, Jury Told.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Chart readings, demonstrating the science of Insull finance in the days that are no more, occupied the attention of jurymen in Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson's court late yesterday. They will be regaled in like manner this morning as the government proceeds to unfold the tale of how Samuel Insull, in his manifold corporate and personal capacity, created a financial structure, bought and sold to himself, dominated La Salle street, and led the investing public out on a limb.

Over the vociferous but unavailing objections of defense attorneys, R. A. Knittle, third of the government's seven key witnesses, a scientific accountant who has spent two years in tracing records in brokerage houses, Insull company books, and the Chicago Stock exchange, produced a series of graphic charts.

Trade in Own Stocks.

The first of the charts placed on a large pedestal before the jury has a series of drawings that look like smokestacks. They indicate, according to this witness, that from the day of the launching of the Corporation Securities company, top investment company of the Insull pyramid, just five years ago, until it faded into obscurity, the group of five Insull investment companies were the chief traders in the stock.

From Oct. 19, 1929, until Nov. 4 of that year the company dealt in its own stock through Halsey, Stuart & Co. Thereafter Utility Securities company took over the management.

The government's twofold purpose here is to show that not only a fictitious value was placed on the stock for this credulous public but that the same values were placed in the books of the company as assets. It is for sending this statement of assets through the mails that Mr. Insull and 16 of his associates are on trial.

Fictitious Values Charged.

Other evidence introduced during the day concerned a syndicate formed by the inner Insull group which sold 417,000 shares of Middle West Utilities stock to two of the Insull investment trusts at $18,000,000, which was above the market price. The government attempted to show a profit of $2,299,067 to this group. The defense preferred to call it a compensation.

It was also shown that Insull and his associates sold 101,000 shares of common and preferred stock of Insull Utility Investments, Inc., to Corporation Securities in August, 1930, accepting a demand note on the company for $6,595,000.

Mr. Knittle said that trading in Corporation Securities stock began five years ago to the day on the Chicago Stock exchange. The high was $100¾ a share. From Oct. 19 to Nov. 4, 1929, he testified, Corporation Securities, through its agents, bought and sold 51,600 shares, or 33.2 per cent of the whole volume of trading in that issue.

First Trading Is Biggest.

There never was any volume of trading comparable with the first few weeks, and the price never was kept that high. In the spring and summer of 1930 the volume of trading went far down.

The detailed figures, showing the amount of trading done by the Insull groups in comparison with the total volume, follow: October, 1929, 85 per cent; November, 48 per cent; December, 44 per cent.

The public was interested at this time and was buying heavily. For 1930, beginning with January, the percentages are as follows: 39, 50, 45, 70, 95, 59, 81, 88, 83, 92, 86, 97. The percentages until October, 1931, follow: 94, 93, 78, 84, 95, 94, 85, 90, 90, 63. The company went into receivership in April, 1932.

Knittle was not permitted to testify until there had been a further argument, with the jury withdrawn, over the admissibility of this line of evidence, particularly the books on which it was based. The witness said he had worked on the books for two years.

The court permitted his summarization to continue, subject to his fixing book and page for each bit of testimony that the defense required.

Ex-Official Tells of Pool.

Through the testimony of P. J. Fallon, former assistant treasurer of Utility Securities, the concern which marketed the Corporation Securities stock, the prosecution brought out the details of the syndicate organized in 1929.

The syndicate had 285 members, including all the defendants and financiers throughout the United States and Europe. It was known as the Middle West preferred and common stock syndicate, and guaranteed to underwrite the reorganization of Middle West Utilities at a figure of $147,000,000 for its stock.

The bulk of this stock was sold to the public at the price the syndicate wished to maintain but it found itself left with 417,600 shares which it wished to dispose of for $18,596,830, according to the government. The syndicate had guaranteed to subscribe the entire $147,000,000 if necessary, but was called on to subscribe only 6 per cent of this, or $8,820,000.

$2,299,607 Profit on $8,820,000.

Through Fallon's testimony and the records of the meetings of the Corporation Securities company and Insull Utility Investments, read by Special Prosecutor Leslie E. Salter, it was shown, according to the prosecution's interpretation, that the syndicate members specified a profit of $2,299,067 for their investment of $8,820,000.

The stock of Middle West, valued at $18,596,830 above the market price, was sold in equal shares to Corporation Securities and Insull Utility Investments, the records showed, thus relieving the syndicate members of their responsibility and giving them a profit. The transaction for the syndicate was managed by Insull, Son & Co., another Insull concern.

Fallon then identified checks sent by Insull, Son & Co., to the defendants who were members of the syndicate. Judge Wilkerson held in abeyance a ruling on whether checks to those defendants who were not officials of Corporation Securities could be introduced in evidence.

The checks introduced yesterday were in the following amounts: Halsey, Stuart & Co. [four of whose officials are defendants], $187,606; Samuel Insull, $150,084, and to him as agent, $7,504; Samuel Insull Jr., $75,042, and as agent, $3,752; the law firm of Isham, Lincoln and Beale [Waldo Tobey, of the law firm, is a defendant], $18,760; Edward J. Doyle, $18,760, and P. J. McEnroe, $7,504. Martin J. Insull, brother of Samuel, who is a defendant but is not on trial, received $75,042.

"Commission, Not Profit."

On cross-examination of Fallon, Attorney Floyd E. Thompson, counsel for the Insulls, attempted to show that the $2,229,067 return of the syndicate's investment should not be regarded as a profit on $8,820,000 but as its commission for underwriting the entire $147,000,000.

"Now, if Samuel Insull guaranteed to subscribe $2,500,000 as his pro-rata share in the syndicate," Attorney Thompson said to the witness, "and was called upon to subscribe 6 per cent of his guarantee, or $150,000, when he received a check for $150,084, he was only making a profit of $84. Isn't that so?"

Clash on Cross-Examination.

But Attorney Salter knew the answer to that.

"By your legerdemain you're trying to make something look screwy," he said to Attorney Thompson. "You will admit there's something screwy, won't you?"

"If there is," Thompson retorted, "it's because you introduced screwy evidence."

The prosecutor then produced the certificate of Insull's subscription to the syndicate and it was disclosed that Insull had reduced this subscription from $2,500,000 to $2,000,000. According to these figures, the six per cent he put up was $120,000 instead of $150,000 and his alleged profit was $30,084.

SURGEONS HEAR OF TESTS CURING CHILDLESSNESS

Results Are Obtained in Half of Cases.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 19.—(AP)—The cure of 50 per cent of childlessness among 100 married couples by the easy method of taking daily a few drops of hormone extracts was reported to the American College of Surgeons here today.

The infertility was not confined to one sex in this group of 200 persons. It was as likely to be the man as the woman and responsibility was quite evenly divided. The results were reported by Dr. Allan Winter Rowe, director of research of the Evans Memorial hospital, Boston.

The extracts which ended the childlessness were those of the pituitary gland, the thyroid, and ovary. The pituitary lies near the base of the brain and governs the coöperation of the entire series of ductless glands, which include not only those of sex but the adrenals, thyroids and parathyroids, or glands which have no apparent direct relation to either sex or fertility.

Lowered Vitality Blamed.

In some instances the infertility appeared to be due to conditions of lowered vitality affecting the body generally. This was especially true of those who were infertile on account of thyroid gland deficiency.

The lack of sufficient thyroid activity reduced the entire bodily energy and had no direct effect on sex. Yet when thyroid extract brought up the general health level the bar to children disappeared.

In the series of 100 couples there were 69 persons whose lack of children proved directly due to trouble with the pituitary gland. Half of these were men and half women. In every case, whether man or woman, giving of pituitary extract ended the lack of children.

About Evenly Divided.

Among those having thyroid difficulties the male partners were largely at fault. There were 27 thyroid persons, 21 of them men and 6 women. The ovarian cases were 21 women.

This gave 56 men and 61 women as the original causes of infertility among the 100 couples. There were 4 persons also who seemed to be a mixture. Dr. Rowe pointed out that the endocrine disturbances are not the only causes of marital infertility.

The recognition of this particular group of troubles involved long and careful observation. It was not easy to find the troubles because in the main these couples were a healthy appearing lot.

The endocrine treatment has now been extended to 150 couples.

Deaths of five automobile victims increased the Cook county trafic toll for the year to 975. They were:

Anthony Bicucci, 8 years old, 3130 Polk street. Died in St. Mary of Nazareth hospital of injuries suffered Wednesday, when he was struck in front of 765 South Kedzie avenue by an automobile driven by Edgar Carter, colored, 570 East 35th street.

Fatally injured when the automobile in which she was riding crashed into the abutment of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad viaduct at Ashland avenue and 15th street. Fred Schultz, 27 years old, 5132 Aberdeen street, driver of the car, was taken to the county hospital in a serious condition.

Maurice Lomasney, 55 years old, 5218 Montana street. Killed when struck by an automobile at Central avenue and Altgeld street. The driver of the car, Ralph Larsen, 26 years old, 1441 North Austin boulevard, a dental student, was held for the inquest.

ULTRA-VIOLET RAYS USED TO PREVENT SNAKE BITE DANGER

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Discovery that ultraviolet rays will make poisonous snake venoms far less poisonous and may be used as a snake bite treatment if immediately applied, was reported today to the Optical Society of America.

Exposing the venom from cobras, rattlesnakes and copperheads to irradiation by ultraviolet rays for ten minutes or more greatly decreases their potency, the society was told by David I. Macht, pharmacological research scientist of Baltimore.

He emphasized, however, that the discovery does not hold out immediate promise of a new ultraviolet ray cure for snake bite. The rays would be useful in treating bites if applied while the venom was still in the open wound immediately after the bite, but only before the venom had been absorbed by the body. Rarely, of course, would a snake bite victim be bitten next door to an ultraviolet ray machine.

Macht tried injecting poisonous snake venom into mice and then treating them with ultraviolet rays after the poison had spread, but found that this had no effect.

Dried venom from snakes was made into a solution, placed in quartz containers and treated with ultraviolet rays generated by a mercury vapor lamp.

DAICHES MURDER STILL A MYSTERY; 3 FREED IN QUIZ

James Murphy and James Menard, who had been arrested for questioning about the murder of Eli Daiches, advertising executive, last March, were released yesterday after a hearing on habeas corpus writs and after the state's attorney's office admitted that the solution of the mysterious slaying was not at hand. Murphy and Menard immediately were rearrested on charges of having participated in a robbery in Berwyn.

A later hearing on the petition for the release of Irving Weitzman, well-to-do south side baker, also held for several days in the Daiches investigation, brought an agreement from the state's attorney and Weitzman was permitted to go home. The prosecutors said they were seeking a man named Jack London.

Another man, Arthur Emblem, was arrested late yesterday in Gary and was taken to the state's attorney's office for questioning about an alleged plot to kill Daiches previous to the actual murder.

Daiches, formerly wealthy head of the Thomas M. Bowers advertising concern, was insured by the firm for $300,000. Ownership of the concern had passed from his hands to Louis A. Weitzman, brother of Irving.

GETS 2 YEARS FOR PERJURY.

John Riley, 31 years old, a truck driver of Chicago, was sentenced yesterday in a Kenosha court to serve two to three years in Wisconsin state prison for testifying falsely in an automobile damage suit there last March.

President was accompanied on a special train by Senators Carter Glass and Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, Congressman Clifton A. Woodrum [Dem., Va.], Admiral Gary T. Grayson and Mrs. Grayson, and military and naval aids and members of the White House staf. Postmaster General James A. Farley was also on the train, coming to Roanoke for a political speech tonight, but his journey had nothing to do with the veterans' hospital dedication.

Tomorrow the President will participate in the induction ceremonies for John Stewart Bryan, new president of William and Mary college and will receive an honorary degree. From Williamsburg the President will proceed to Yorktown and board the yacht Sequoia, on which he will return to Washington Monday.

ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH

The President's address follows:

"In coming to Roanoke to take part in the dedication of the latest addition to our chain of veterans' hospitals, I do not seek to enumerate or to catalog the many steps which have been taken by your federal government to care for its veterans of many wars.

"Most of you in this great audience are from this neighborhood and in the years to come the men who will occupy this hospital will be your friends and your neighbors. I commend them to your care.

"You see before you today a monument which is representative of the national policy that the government is seeking to give aid not only to veterans but also to hundreds of thousands of other citizens—men and women and children who, handicapped by environment or by circumstance, lack today what reasonable people call the essentials of modern civilization.

"For many years we have seen a constantly growing realization of the fact that any large or small group which lacks the elementary necessities of proper food, of decent housing, of adequate medical attention, of essential education, drags down the level of the country as a whole and retards its progress.

"In one sense these men and women and children are not forgotten people for the very good reason that we have known of their existence and appreciated their plight for many years. In another sense, however, they have been forgotten for it is only in recent years that government has undertaken to help them on a national scale.

Points to Magnitude of Task.

"The further we go in our survey to find out who these people are and where they live, the more appalled I am by the magnitude of our task. Most of us know in general terms of the slum conditions which exist in many of our cities. Most of us know, from hearsay at least, of people who have lived for generations in back eddies remote from the active stream of life. But we have failed to realize the existence of the underprivileged who are present and largely forgotten in practically every one of the more than 3,000 counties of the 48 states of the Union.

"The improvement of their hard lot is a definite obligation on all of our citizens, and I am confident that the veterans of our American wars will be among the first to recognize this fact.

Looks to Future Welfare.

"The improvement of their hard lot compels our immediate exertions, not only because of the individual human beings who suffer today, but even more important to the future of America, because future generations of American citizens will become the descendants of those who are now in need. In this thought also the veterans of our wars will go along.

"Let it be well remembered that the hundreds of thousands of men and women and children to whom I have referred, scattered throughout our nation, have no splendid hospitals for their care, have no medical attention such as we will provide here, have no good food and decent raiment such as will be provided in this veterans' home; have no opportunities for adequate education, and can but suffer the ills of their lives according to their own individual circumstances.

Sees Country Better Off.

"You have heard it said that we must restore prosperity. You have heard some kind people say that the country is distinctly better off from a material point of view than it was last year. I am inclined to agree with them. Other people, who fail to think things through, forget that one cause of the depression which we are beginning to leave behind, was the very existence of hundreds of thousands of men, women and children who have been and continue to be a definite drag against the return of prosperity.

"It must remain our constant objective to eliminate the causes of depression and the drags on prosperity. It will cost money to do this. In the spending of this money we must have due regard for the good credit of the government of the United States. That means that we cannot spend at once or in any given year all that we could usefully spend.

First Things First.

"I mentioned once upon a time that we must do first things first; the care of the disabled, the sick, the destitute and the starving is the first thing. To do this the veterans of American wars gave their approval in agreement with the overwhelming majority of our other citizens.

"I make this statement in regard to the veterans of America not only because I am confident of their patriotism and their understanding of our national needs but also for two other reasons. The first is that our federal government and our state governments have given to them many privileges not accorded to other citizens, and the other reason is that it has been amply demonstrated that the veterans of the world war, today in the prime of life, are better off from the point of view of employment and of annual income than the average of any other great group of our citizens.

"Let these facts, let this great monument—this veterans' hospital and the other institutions of their kind throughout the country—serve as a symbolic and bold denial of any careless statement that the United States does not take care of those who have served it in war—and as a symbolic affirmance of our belief in the underlying patriotic willingness of our veterans to put first things first."

THREE PENGUINS IN NEW HOME AT SHEDD AQUARIUM

Three penguins from the Galapagos islands in the south Pacific ocean were introduced to the Chicago public yesterday in their new specially built quarters in the Shedd aquarium.

A specially designed tank was built to house the penguins. In it are a rockwork with tiny steps, a salt water pool for drinking and bathing and an exhibition tank enclosed and heated to a proper balmy temperature.

EXPERTS DEPICT HELPLESS CITIES DURING AIR WAR

Hawks, Sikorsky Differ with MacArthur.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Giant airplanes now being perfected could swoop down on the United States from either Europe or the orient and level great cities like Chicago or New York in a few minutes, two leading aircraft experts told the federal aviation commission today.

Igor Sikorsky, famous airplane designer and manufacturer, and Frank Hawks, speed pilot and war time flyer, were the two experts who today appeared before the commission. They both said that America's only defense lies in development of a modern air fighting force.

Contradict Army Chief.

Warnings of these two experts were regarded as particularly significant in view of the deprecating attitude toward air attack taken by Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur, chief of staf. Gen. MacArthur has held that "our general situation almost elimnates the possibility of unsupported air attacks" at present.

Disagreeing sharply with the view of the chief of staf, Sikorsky and Hawks today gave the aviation commission a vivid picture of America's vulnerability from the air.

"With present available equipment," Hawks declared, "I can fly from Tokio or even Shanghai to New York City in 48 hours. If we were to have enemies in either the orient or soviet Russia the same performance can be accomplished. The Japanese wouldn't care if they ever returned or not. There are plenty of young Japanese warriors who would willingly sacrifice their lives for the chance to fly on to New York and destroy our skyscrapers with their bombs. It wouldn't just be bombs, unfortunately, but more probably poison gas which would wipe out the population of Manhattan and the adjacent sectors."

Cites Ideal Bases.

Hawks cautioned the United States to keep close watch in the Aleutian Islands and Alaska as well as of Hawaii and the Philippines as valuable assets in the defense of America from air attack. These territories, he pointed out, offer excellent bases for air operations, either defensive or offensive.

Sikorsky told the commission of huge air cruisers capable of flying 4,000 miles and of carrying 56 passengers and 1,000 pounds of mail. Such planes are now being developed, he warned, and if converted to military use could easily carry enough bombs to destroy New York in a few minutes.

Such planes, operating from airplane carriers off the coast, could wing over New York carrying 200,000 pounds of explosive apiece, and blast the city into ruins, he said.

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

THREE CHARGED IN 'BADGER GAME' BACK FOR TRIAL

Edward Grady, 40 years old, Lloyd Coates, 35 years old, and his wife, Mary, 28 years old, a manicurist, all of Cincinnati, were brought to Chicago yesterday for trial on charges of impersonating a federal officer in a "badger game" attempt.

The trio were named in an indictment returned before Federal Judge John P. Barnes as the result of an alleged attempt to extort $100,000 from Charles P. Morton, 65 years old, wealthy Cincinnati manufacturer, while he was staying at a Chicago hotel Aug. 25.

Mrs. Coates learned of Morton's plan to visit Chicago, according to Assistant United States Attorney Edward A. Fisher, and she came here and registered at the same hotel. Later she voluntarily entered Morton's room.

ICKES ATTACKS G. O. P. LEADERS IN QUAKER STATE

New Deal the Only Issue, Secretary Says.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes tonight carried the weight of the Roosevelt administration into the bitter Pennsylvania political campaign with a declaration that the "New Deal is the only issue."

The cabinet member said the Republican party no longer is the "party of Abraham Lincoln, devoted to the welfare of the average man and woman," but one in which "wealth and special privilege are its chief concern."

Assails Andrew Mellon.

He turned on Andrew W. Mellon, three times secretary of the treasury and for years a stalwart of Republicanism in Pennsylvania, and charged:

"He was one of those chiefly responsible for the crash of 1929 . . . and one of the largest contributors to the slush fund that has served to lubricate the political machine that has made possible the reactionary Republican majority in this state."

Of Senator David A. Reed, fiery critic of New Deal policies, the secretary said:

"With mourning band on the left arm and a bit of extra crape for a hatband, he loves to go from place to place bemoaning the loss of liberties of rich clients whom he assumes to be people, and lugubriously predicting early fall of the republic, since it no longer is in the safe and possessive grasp of Mr. Mellon and his associates."

Cites State as Example.

Himself a native of the Keystone state, which has been a bulwark of Republicanism for more than 70 years, Ickes said of the "old deal":

"This state, that is so dear to all of us, has stood out among all other states as an example of an exploiting minority fattening upon the miseries and oppressions of a great, but helpless people."

REJECT PWA AID FOR ST. CHARLES SEWAGE PLANT

The city council of St. Charles, at a meeting Thursday, rejected a grant of $30,000 made conditionally by the Public Works administration to help finance the construction of a $100,000 sewage disposal plant. Holding that the PWA restrictions were too rigorous and would so seriously hamper the construction program that "little or no benefit" would accrue to St. Charles, the council decided, by a vote of 6 to 3, to build the plant entirely with its own funds.

St. Charles has reached the limit of its bonded indebtedness, but has a cash reserve fund of $92,000 built up from profits on the sale of electric power and water. The disposal plant is to be the city's contribution to the improvement of the Fox river, in which other communities are cooperating.

The bill, drawn by Attorney Norman Becker, charged Marquam struck his wife on two occasions. The cause of the cruelty, Mrs. Marquam charges, was her husband's jealousy of her new career in the movies.

PINCHOT CHARGE ELICITS DENIAL FROM MELLON

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Andrew W. Mellon broke a long political silence today to deny a charge by his bitter critic, Gov. Gifford Pinchot, that Mellon money was used to repay the government for funds which Joseph F. Guffey was charged with embezzling 13 years ago.

Guffey is the Democratic candidate for the United States senate in Pennsylvania, running against Senator David A. Reed, Republican stalwart.

Pinchot charged last night that Guffey received the money and squared himself on a federal indictment returned in connection with a shortage of funds in the alien property custodian's office, for which Guffey handled sales.

In the midst of one of the most bitter election campaigns in Pennsylvania's history, Pinchot made the charge last night and challenged Guffey and Mellon to deny it. Guffey did so last night.

Mellon's denial came this afternoon. The indictment against Guffey was quashed several years ago.

Of the Guffey-Reed race Pinchot said last night:

"I still do not stand for any of the things Reed stands for, but he is the best of a bad bargain. Reed is Mellon's man open and above board. Guffey is Mellon's man secretly and below board."

Mellon's answer said:

"Gov. Pinchot evidently has been misinformed. Mr. Guffey does not owe me any money and has never owed me any."

PRETTIEST BABY IN U. S. SELECTED AT WORLD'S FAIR

America's most beautiful baby is a girl, according to the voting of visitors to the World's Fair. Results of the contest, announced yesterday, gave first honors to Marilyn Yvonne Miller, 15 month old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Miller of Pierre, S. D. The prize was $5,000 in cash and a $5,000 college educational policy.

Parents of the baby said yesterday in Pierre that the prize winning picture was taken at the request of a nurse in the hospital where the baby was born. The nurse wanted the picture for the hospital nursery. The Millers learned of the contest the day before it closed and submitted the picture. Mr. Miller is a commercial photographer.

Other Winners of Prizes.

Not only did the girls take first honors in the contest, but also the next three places. Out of the ten winners from the field of more than a hundred thousand entries seven were girls.

Second place went to Frances Jean Lupe, 3 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lupe, 8215 Champlain avenue, Chicago. The award carried a $1,000 cash prize and a $4,000 scholarship. Patricia Ann Lindenberg, 1 year old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther T. Lindenberg, Faribault, Minn., took fourth place with an award of $300.

The first boy to place in the voting was Tommy Cook, 3 year old son of Mrs. M. Cook, 5615 Forrest avenue, Kansas City, Mo. His fifth place award carried a prize of $200 in cash.

Contest Draws 114,365 Entries.

2 YOUNG BANDITS CAPTURED AFTER CRASH; ONE SHOT

One of two young robbers was shot, and both were captured last night, when the stolen car in which they were fleeing from police crashed into another machine.

The two prisoners are William Dailey, 25 years old, of 4504 North Artesian avenue, and Michael Phillips, 21 years old, of 452 North Lincoln street. Phillips was shot in the leg.

The two had robbed the filling station of Michael Kovelli, 2800 West Grand avenue, of $12, and shortly afterward were sighted by the squad of Sergt. Walter Miller. A chase ensued.

At Wood street and Jackson boulevard the fleeing automobile hit the car of Mrs. Henry Heaviside, 426 Kenilworth avenue, Oak Park, who was with her daughter, Grace, 20 years old. Neither woman was hurt.

After the crash, the two young gunmen attempted to flee on foot.

IF EMPLOYES HAD THEIR WISH, FAIR WOULD NEVER DIE

Hope for Continuation; It Means Vital Jobs!

Fair employés representing a small cross-section of some thirty thousand on the grounds of A Century of Progress, interviewed yesterday, discussed what another modified exposition or recurring summer recreational-educational attraction on the Fair grounds would mean to them.

Mrs. Grace Sanburn, 4540 Woodlawn avenue, a waitress in the employés' restaurant in the Administration building, has been employed steadily there since January, 1931. After having been employed for many years in some of the better eating houses in Chicago, she was unemployed for six months before obtaining the Fair job. She is known to hundreds of employés for her ability to remember the peculiar personal likings of many persons she serves daily.

Hopes for More "Fair" Days.

"I'll be here through most of the winter," she said. "but it will be sad, knowing the Fair is going to close. I hope they have something else here to succeed it. I don't make so much money here, but it is fun. We're like a big family. I'm not worried for fear I can't get another job, but I'd rather work here."

Thomas Murray, 30 years old, of 500 West 78th street, uniformed World's Fair patrolman, said he was one of 215 men on the force who will lose their jobs Nov. 1 unless the consolidated park board puts them on the pay roll as park patrolmen.

A former insurance underwriter and later a salesman, Murray has been on the Fair police force for the duration of both expositions. He said he had "enjoyed every minute of it," adding that if he could look forward to employment at another exposition next summer he could obtain odd jobs to suport himself through the winter months.

Adds Voice for Continuation.

R. E. Smith, 23 years old, married, of Riverside, a bus starter during both the 1933 and 1934 expositions, declared the Fair had "been a godsend" to him and that, in his opinion, a continuation of a modified exposition would be a godsend to Chicago. A former student at the University of Illinois, Smith has prospects of obtaining an advertising job after Nov. 1, he said.

Miss Margaret Black, 7000 Paxton avenue, 23 year old former University of Chicago student, blonde and pretty employé at the customer research exhibit in the General Motors building, would be glad for the opportunity of working at the Fair grounds another year, she said.

Al Koehler, 6609 North Rockwell street, a former Northwestern university student, was asked between the turnings of a hamburger what he thought about another exposition or similar attraction's being established on the Fair grounds.

"Would I like it?" he repeated. "Say, do I like to eat? I've been working at a hamburger stand throughout both last year's and this year's Fairs, and I think I've got the best job on the Fair grounds. Most of us are hoping to get permanent jobs at the packing houses."

World's Fair Notes

Miss Dolores Diane Freymouth, 1354 Roosevelt court, Gary, was declared winner last night in the finals of the "contest of contests" in the Lagoon theater. Miss Freymouth, an acrobatic dancer, was awarded a $25 prize. The contestants were all winners in previous contests held for amateur entertainers at the Fair. Second place went to Cecil Roy, third to Doris Ross and fourth to John Burdette, colored baritone who sang in THE TRIBUNE Music festival.

Oswaldo Aranha, Brazilian ambassador to the United States, was greeted at the Fair yesterday by President Rufus C. Dawes, and was given a 19 gun salute. The diplomat is making his first visit to this country, having been appointed ambassador just three weeks ago.

Since A Century of Progress opened its gates in 1933, more than three million cameras have been brought in the grounds, according to a report yesterday by C. D. Kaufman, director of the Hall of Photography. Mr. Kaufman estimates that fifty million photographs have been taken at the Fair.

The last of the General Motors excursion groups arrived last night for a two day stay. The entire party, coming from the factory in Detroit, consists of women. More than 10,500 employés have come to the Fair on these excursions.

Seven thousand employés of Wilson & Co. were given a half holiday yesterday, which permitted them to attend the Wilson day celebration at the Fair. Thomas E. Wilson, chairman of the board of directors, and Edward F. Wilson, president, were present.

LEGION GROUPS STOP AT FAIR ON WAY TO MIAMI

A prelude to the American Legion convention in Miami was held at the World's Fair yesterday with commemorative services in the Legion building. Bugle and drum corps furnished music and several hundred Legionnaires gathered to discuss the coming convention. As guests there were several groups from the west and north who stopped in Chicago to see the Fair on their way to the convention.

Special trains are carrying thousands of the delegates, with every Chicago post sending a contingent. Among the large groups were 175 members of the Board of Trade post, leaving on twelve special cars over the Pennsylvania lines, a special train over the Illinois Central carrying Nebraska delegates, and the Police post and Mel Tierney post delegations, also leaving over the Illinois Central.

G. O. P. JUBILANT OVER OUTCOME OF STRAW POLL

New Dealers Dismayed by Result.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—New Dealers were heavily jolted today when they scanned the results of a poll taken by the Literary Digest, a poll which indicated that the Roosevelt policies have suffered tremendous losses in public support.

Republican leaders were jubilant over the showing. Henry P. Fletcher, Republican national chairman, touched off this tart paragraph:

"The New Deal, as was expected, is sinking fast. Its unsound foundation of quack economics made this inevitable. In spite of crack down threats, of the Tammanyized use of government funds to aid its political candidates, public sentiment is running strongly against the New Deal. This is the information contained in the latest poll of the Literary Digest."

Farley Shows No Dismay.

From Democratic Chairman Farley: "I merely repeat what I have said before, that the administration in the coming election will reach its highest point of victory and that the Republican party will be at the lowest ebb since the civil war."

It is axiomatic that Mr. Farley never shows dismay, but from other New Dealers there was a real concern over the showing in the poll.

The figures, resulting from the sending out of questionnaires to 65,000 persons, the same individuals to whom the same questionnaire was sent last March and April, indicated on the face of it that popular endorsement of the Roosevelt policies has shrunk from a 69 per cent majority to a bare majority of slightly less than 51 per cent.

It was indicated by the poll figures that 17 states now reject the Roosevelt policies, some of them by large majorities. In the earlier poll only one state, Delaware, opposed the New Deal. The main poll conducted by the magazine in May and June, in which 15,000,000 votes were distributed, showed a 61 per cent endorsement of Rooseveltian policy.

Democrats State Views.

The Democratic spokesmen pointed out various features of the present poll to sustain their claims that the Nov. 6 election will not prove disastrous to the Roosevelt majorities in both houses. They reiterated their assertions that the party will gain several seats in the senate, and will lose not more than 25 or 30 seats in the house. If the congress was elected according to the figures shown in the poll the house would be evenly divided.

The Democrats, however, declared that while it may be true that the Roosevelt policies are weakening with the populace, it does not follow from this that the dissenters would vote for Republicans.

The accuracy of the poll, in which it was said only 12,000 of the 65,000 ballots were marked and returned for counting, was also attacked. It was declared that perhaps less than 25 per cent of the same persons on the list voted in both polls, and that various economic changes might have come to induce different types of people to manifest their choice by casting a ballot.

But on the whole it was felt by impartial observers that the poll does disclose accurately a sharp trend toward repudiation of the New Deal schemes.

Says Test in Election.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, New Deal leader of the senate, greeted newspaper men in his office today, after having returned yesterday from a European trip. He sought to dispose of the Digest poll results with a suggestion that it was in some manner the work of opponents of the New Deal, and he declared that the real test would come in the election, which he predicted would be disappointing to the Republican leadership.

He stressed the "fundamental importance" of balancing the budget, but conceded it could not be done at this time, because of the need for relieving "the wants of those who may be suffering." In a significant addition, testifying to doubts concerning the radical policies of President Roosevelt, Senator Robinson said:

"In my view of the matter, emphasis must be given to the importance of reviving business, since without this the purposes of the New Deal cannot be consummated. The government should not engage in enterprises that private capital can be induced to carry on, and as private resources are made available, the government should withdraw credit and funds and wherever practicable leave the spheres of efforts open to private entities."

Candidates on Nov. 6 Ballot

Democratic.

Mitchell C. Robin has served two terms as Probate clerk. He was born in Chicago and attended Washburne Grammar school and the Medill High school. During the Dever administration he was a member of the board of local improvements for four years. Robin is a member of several clubs and lodges and has been a patron of the Boy Scout movement.

Republican.

Jacob D. Allen has managed several Republican campaigns in recent years, mostly for the Deneen group. He was the Deneen-backed candidate for clerk of the Superior court in 1932. Mr. Allen was born in Glenstead, Mo., and was educated in Morrisonville college and the University of the Pacific. For a number of years he has been an organizer for commercial and civic associations. Prior to that he was in railroad construction work. Mr. Allen served four and one-half years in the army, enlisting as a private and emerging a commissioned officer. He was with Pershing in Mexico and overseas with the A. E. F.

Aimee McPherson Sued for 1928 Income Taxes

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson was accused of failing to pay her 1928 federal income tax in a lien for $635.62 filed today by John P. Carter, collector of internal revenue.

POLITICAL SIGNS TO BE TORN FROM PUBLIC PROPERTY

Police Commissioner Allman yesterday issued a general order over the teletype directing policemen to tear down the signs of political candidates which have been attached to public utility poles and public buildings in violation of the city ordinance. He said he had received numerous complaints that violation of the ordinance was prevalent throughout the city.

A tour of the west side yesterday revealed that more than 100 political placards have been attached to posts along Madison street between Halsted street and Pulaski road. The signs of a dozen candidates in the November election were displayed in violation of the ordinance.

Mrs. Jean Weis, civic director of the Woman's City club of Chicago, said the club, which for years has made efforts to have the candidates comply with the ordinance, has found it "an almost impossible task" and consequently is concentrating its efforts on having the signs removed immediately after the election.

Once school dunce . . .
NOW HEADS CLASS
Thanks to simple change in diet . . .

HE WAS ALWAYS HUNGRY

Apparently the only thing my boy really did well was eat. He ate . . . and ate . . . and ate! But still he was dull and listless and always tired.

His school marks were a caution! I knew it wasn't because he was stupid . . . he'd always been such a bright little fellow! My friends said, "It's just growing pains," but they weren't very convincing. I knew something must be wrong.

WOULDN'T EVEN PLAY

I was doubly sure when he lost his enthusiasm for baseball, always his favorite game. So I called on the school nurse. My talk with her was an eye-opener. She said that my boy had no energy because he wasn't getting enough energy-food. She suggested that I give him good bread, at meals and between times.

A SIMPLE CHANGE TO WONDER

I'd read about Wonder Bread. And my friends were almost unanimous in suggesting it. I'm glad I chose Wonder now. Slo-baking not only makes it tender and delicious, but keeps it that way until I am ready to serve it. Best of all, it has plenty of energy value . . . it's helped my boy and all the rest of us, too.

A BIG CHANGE IN MY BOY

So many women have discovered the benefits of Wonder Bread that it's served on more tables today than any other bread. Wonder Bread is Nature's best energy-food, carefully prepared, and thoroughly delicious. It's at your grocer's. Remember the name Wonder. Look for the famous red, yellow and blue balloon wrapper.

REPUBLICANS SEE POLL OUTCOME AS SIGN OF VICTORY

BY PARKE BROWN.

Accepting it as the best possible evidence of a steady swing of voters' sentiment toward their party, Cook county Republicans intend to give the result of the recent poll of sentiment on the New Deal taken by the Literary Digest a predominant place in the program for their big massmeeting at the Chicago Stadium next Monday night.

At both state and county headquarters, the figures made public yesterday were hailed with rejoicing as just the sort of confirmation needed for increasingly optimistic reports concerning the G. O. P. outlook in Cook county and throughout Illinois. A gain of 20 per cent in opposition to the New Deal, the managers pointed out, was the most cheering news from an authoritative source received during the campaign. They predicted that the indicated trend away from Democracy would continue right up to election day.

Plan to Make Big Point of Poll.

Because of this optimistic feeling, it was planned to impress the Monday night crowd with the importance of the poll returns, with especial emphasis on the fact that they come from an impartial source.

C. Wayland Brooks, chairman of the meeting, will take up this subject in his opening remarks, and it is planned to give every person in attendance a facsimile reproduction of the page from the Literary Digest containing the complete text of the statement concerning the poll, as well as the tabulation of the results.

Brooks said yesterday that no campaign in recent years had been marked by such an emphatic interruption of the customary conflicting estimates of the rival parties.

"We want every voter to know the exact facts about this impartial test of public opinion and the change that has come in a few months," he said. "It will go far toward making them forget the boastings of our opponents."

Predict Another Slogan Change.

County Chairman William H. Weber said he would not be surprised if the Cook county Democrats again change their slogan which now is "Forward with Roosevelt."

According to Justus L. Johnson, Republican state chairman, his headquarters also will be active in bringing the Literary Digest poll figures to the attention of the voters.

"Nothing more significant ever happened before at this stage of a campaign," he said.

"The magazine poll of voters last April showed Illinois approximately two to one in favor of the New Deal. The poll of the same persons in September showed that a good majority—a majority of about 53 to 47 according to the ratio of the percentages—now is opposed to the New Deal.

"Such a sweeping change is even more significant than it appears on its face when we recall that widespread analysis of the faults of the present federal policies, of criticism and even condemnation did not begin until after the first poll was closed. They began in June and it was then that the big change started to get under way."

California Has Other Utopian Schemes if Sinclair Is Beaten

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—If Upton Sinclair should fail to put across his socialistic EPIC plan to "end poverty in California," you might regard it a setback for cult business of Los Angeles. If so, it would be because you underestimate the climate in which fads, reforms, panaceas, and isms of all kinds spring up over night like Jack's beanstalk.

DR. F. E. TOWNSEND.

As a matter of fact, Los Angeles has in reserve right now half a dozen Utopian schemes of which the country is going to hear at no distant date, particularly if the state rejects Sinclairism on Nov. 6. Among them are the Townsend revolving fund old age pension plan, schemes of the Utopian society, and the national dated purchase money plan.

Panacea for Depression.

The Townsend old age pension scheme, urged not only as a means of supporting the superannuated, but as a panacea for the depression, already has attained the magnitude of a national movement. Organizations promoting the plan have been established in every state except Delaware. Dr. F. E. Townsend, a Los Angeles physician, author of the proposal, says he will leave for Washington in a few days to consult with the Roosevelt administration on plans for getting it enacted into law by the next congress.

The project has been indorsed by most of the southern California congressional candidates and by Gov. Frank F. Merriam, Republican candidate to succeed himself, who regards it in harmony with the Republican plank declaring that an old age pension program should be a national, not a state, undertaking. Sinclair, while not rejecting it altogether, says that his EPIC old age pension plan is more practicable.

The Townsend plan provides that every citizen sixty years old or more who does not have a criminal record and does not have an independent income, shall receive a monthly pension of $200, which must be spent during the month in the United States. It may be spent in any manner desired, the only condition being that it cannot be hoarded. It is proposed that this shall be paid by the federal government, funds for such a purpose to be raised by a general sales tax. The sponsors assert 10,000,000 persons in the United States would be eligible for such a pension, which would require a monthly expenditure of $2,000,000,000. On a $200 a month basis, they figure a sales tax of 5 or 10 per cent would be required.

Automatic Revolving Fund.

The sponsors contend that it would be necessary for the government to finance only the starting month, after which it would develop into an automatic revolving fund.

Contentions in behalf of the plan are that:

1. This flow of money would stimulate business generally and definitely end the depression.

2. It immeditely would remove several million elderly men from all kinds of working positions and open these places to younger men.

3. It would provide economic security for every citizen who has devoted his or her life to honest endeavor.

4. The monthly flow of money would restore business to a stage where new jobs would be opened for men not eligible to the pension.

5. The resultant prosperity would more than offset any additional burden created by the sales tax that would supply the funds.

6. The Utopian society, which has an enormous following, has employed spectacular methods to promote its schemes for a socialized state somewhat similar to Sinclair's.

500,000 Attend Meetings.

It is estimated that more than 500,000 have attended gatherings of this society, but how many ever paid a $3 fee and became full fledged members is a carefully guarded secret.

The original incorporators were Eugene J. Reed, an investment banker; Walter H. Reausaw, a promoter, and Merritt T. Kennedy, one time retail sales manager of the Julian Petroleum corporation.

Originally meetings were held in private homes with workers inviting prospective members. After several reorganizations, Jonathan F. Glendon, an actor, became its president and the first great drive began when he addressed a capacity audience in Hollywood bowl on May 23.

$3 Fee to See Fourth Cycle.

After that the society leased the huge shrine auditorium for meetings and invited the public. In dramatic tableaux were depicted the tribulations of impoverished pilgrims under the capitalist system, wandering in search of food and shelter. It became necessary to pay the $3 fee only to witness the fourth "cycle" which revealed the Utopian plan to correct the evils and the fifth "cycle" in which secret rituals and passwords of the order were used.

The "fifth" plan is for the government to issue dated money that could be used to purchase something and would become valueless after it had been thus used, or if not used within one year. It proposes that this money at all times "be kept in constant balance with the amount of goods and services available in the country" and allocated to every citizen accordingly. Glendon said every producer would get the equivalent of $10,000 to $20,000 a year. Persons under twenty-five would be classed as students. Those from twenty-five to forty-five would be subject to call as workers in whatever place they might be needed and all over forty-five years would receive an allocation on a retirement basis.

ORGANIZED LABOR INDORSES RELIEF BONDS FOR STATE

Organized labor in Illinois has unanimously endorsed the proposed $30,000,000 emergency relief bond issue, it was announced last night by the committee formed to gain the required majority of "yes" votes at the polls Nov. 6.

Supporting the bond issue are the Illinois State Federation of Labor, the Chicago Federation of Labor, and the Joint Legislative board of organized labor, which is composed of union officials, including those of the Women's Trade Union leagues of Chicago and Illinois.

"It will be necessary to get a majority of all votes cast for members of the general assembly in the entire state," says the report of the Chicago federation's legislative committee. "So if you fail to vote 'Yes' it is a vote against the bond issue. Therefore, it is the duty of every delegate to instruct his friends that they must vote 'Yes' on the small ballot, or they will be burdened with a heavy tax burden which the legislature has put on their backs at this last session."

IOWANS LEARN NEW DEAL SANTA IS INDIAN GIVER

Farmer Finds He Pays Processing Tax.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Council Bluffs, Ia., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—The processing tax and the gumshoe work of burocrats in checking up the birthdays of Iowa pigs appear to be tophole factors in the changing sentiment now indicated in the champion corn-hog commonwealth.

Farmer Pays the Tax.

The farmer instead of the consumer is paying the tax with which the checks are to be paid.

As one travels in the corn belt, complaints are reverberating that the New Deal's Christmas presents are thus turning out to be Indian gifts.

By many this is adduced as a chief reason why, in the AAA referendum, only 35 per cent of the corn-hog contract signers who are participating in the $78,727,900 disbursement voted to continue the corn-hog program in 1935.

Some weeks ago the agricultural experiment station at Ames, Ia., put out a bulletin which dwelt on the question of whether the farmer or the consumer pays the processing tax in the following words:

"The farmers are paying the tax themselves; the tax comes out of one overalls' pocket and goes back into another pocket in the form of benefit payments for reducing hog production."

The kicks against the processing tax come not alone from the farmer. Prices of meats have gone up, and the consumer is letting out a roar against the tinkerings of the brain trust.

Unmistakable signs of a swinging sentiment in Iowa against some of the New Deal experimentation seem as plainly in the air as they were in Democratic Georgia against the Bankhead cotton control act in the recent Democratic primaries.

Cut Off Price of Hogs.

The processing tax on hogs is expected to run about 50 million dollars in Iowa. It is not all collected here, but as it is cut off the price of the hogs, it is paid here by the farmers.

One thing that has caused much agrarian grumbling is the small army of Brain Trust agents that have been "investigating" Iowa.

One case is that of the Brain Truster from Ohio who came out here to look over the records. In one case a farmer reported 7 months pigs, farrowed in January and sold in July, at 230 pounds each. The Brain Truster declared no hog could put on that much weight in seven months. He insisted they must have been born before January, which would put them into the crop of the preceding season and cut down the average on which allotment is based.

Neighbors Come to Rescue.

The farmer called in his neighbors. They testified they knew his pigs were born in January, and that 230 pounds was nothing unusual for an Iowa 7 months hog to weigh, not when fed on Iowa corn.

In the end the Brain Truster threw up his hands, turned his inquiries over to the local agencies, and beat it back. The farmers, incensed, took the view that pretty soon the professiorat might be requiring them to furnish birth certificates with every pig sent to market.

FEDERAL JUDGE DENIES AAA RULE OVER IOWA MILK

Says Local Prices May Not Be Regulated.

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—In a courtroom located not many blocks from his publishing house here, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace today received a legal setback when Federal Judge Charles A. Dewey ruled the AAA was without power to regulate milk sales conducted entirely within the state.

Judge Dewey's decision denied the government's request for an injunction restraining the Hillcrest dairy of Des Moines from doing business. The court decided that the dairy was operating entirely within the state of Iowa and thus was not subject to control by the AAA.

Government lawyers had contended that sale of milk in the Des Moines area affects and is affected by interstate commerce, and thus could be federally regulated. The AAA had accused the Hillcrest company of violating provisions of the agricultural adjustment act and the milk license promulgated for the Des Moines area under the statute.

Interstate Powers Upheld.

Judge Dewey agreed that congress has power under the constitution to control that "which directly and substantially affects interstate commerce," but denied that its authority extends "where such effect is secondary, accidental, or remote."

At the hearing the dairy had challenged constitutionality of the agricultural adjustment act in that it placed legislative powers in the secretary of agriculture's hands. The dairy argued that the license is without due process of law, and that it could not affect business being done within the state.

"We consider," Judge Dewey ruled, "the latter defense as determinative of the questions presented."

Not Interstate Commerce.

"The price they pay or receive for their milk may be affected or controlled by the price in industrial centers to which excess milk supplies are shipped in interstate commerce, but it does not follow that the business conducted by the defendants so affects the price of milk in industrial centers as to be a burden on interstate commerce.

"In this case it is so clear that the business of the defendant is not within the current of interstate commerce that I could not conscientiously hold otherwise," Judge Dewey said.

Despite Judge Dewey's decision, William O. Perdue, market milk administrator here for the AAA, said today he will continue his efforts to enforce the license pending a final decision from the United States Supreme court.

MAY LOSE LICENSE

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—William Bell, proprietor of the Oak Grove dairy, small retail milk establishment here, cited today to appear before the secretary of agriculture to show cause why his milk license should not be revoked, was puzzled upon receipt of formidable registered letters from Washington, informing him of the charges against him.

Bell was bewildered by the nature of the charges against him. He showed the official notification to a reporter, who gleaned from one paragraph the information that he had been paying "a flat rate of $1.85 a hundred pounds" for milk delivered at his dairy.

The Port Huron Milk Distributing industry is organized on the "base and surplus" plan, under which a proportion of the milk purchased by dealers is to be paid for at the rate of $1.85 a hundred, the remainder at about 80 cents a hundred, representing the value of the milk if used for cream, butter, or other manufacturing uses.

"All the milk I buy I bottle. Part of it I turn over to another dairyman who has a route about as large as mine, the rest I deliver myself. So it all is sold as fluid milk. I don't see why I shouldn't pay the top price for it," Bell commented.

SHAFFER SEEKS MODIFICATION OF DIVORCE DECREE

Carroll Shaffer, who formerly owned most of the capital stock of the Chicago Evening Post, no longer published, yesterday filed a cross-petition in the Superior court asking that the decree of divorce won by his wife, Pauline Bullard Shaffer, July 7, 1924, be modified to relieve him from payment of sums of money alleged to be due for the support and education of his two sons, John Charles Shaffer II. and Robert Shaffer.

The petition sets forth that Shaffer's financial condition has been considerably impaired since the divorce was granted, and that his interest in his mother's estate has been assigned to creditors. Shaffer is now connected with the publication, Movie News.

SATURDAY NEWS OF NEW BOOKS

Mrs. Lawrence Adds Little to Study of Genius

'Not I but the Wind' Fails to Meet Hopes.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Not I but the Wind," by Frieda Lawrence. [Viking.]

TO add to the already long list of volumes about D. H. Lawrence published since his death in 1930, there comes now a volume of memoirs from the pen of his wife. All of the hot headed Lawrence adherents or enemies have been waiting for what both sides hoped would be—if not literally the last word on Lawrence as a person at least figuratively so — the most intimate of all the pictures of a man who seemed to have inspired those who write about him to reaches of intimacy rare in literature.

The first of those intensely intimate bombardments was J. Middleton Murry's "Son of Woman," an estimate of his friend so bitterly outspoken [that Lawrence might attain his full stature as an artist, Mr. Murry gave as his reason for writing the book] and so psychologically tense that Catherine Carswell, another friend, contradicted it with as violent a book, "Savage Pilgrimage."

Mr. Murry countered with still further "Reminiscences of D. H. Lawrence," more personal than critical. Mabel Dodge Luhan in "Lorenzo in Taos" wrote another violently intimate record of the visit of the Lawrences to New Mexico and the peculiarly close spiritual relationship which she felt she had with Lawrence [and the quarrels she had with Frieda]. The Hon. Dorothy Brett, adorer and votary of Lawrence, who accompanied him and his wife to America and became another dagger point in the spiritual battles in Mexico and New Mexico, gave us still another passionately intimate volume in "Lawrence and Brett, a Friendship."

Overshadowing them all was Aldous Huxley's impressive editing of the voluminous correspondence of D. H. Lawrence with a superbly balanced introduction which gave, with the letters, really the most intimate picture of all. Conspicuously absent from that correspondence were any letters from Lawrence to his wife, although in many letters Lawrence made his intense love for her unmistakable. The world knew that their marriage was not all prunes and prisms . . . he threw glasses of wine in her face at times, and she fought back with edged cruelty.

But inherent in his marriage was the secret of Lawrence's special psychosis, and the world hoped that when Frieda Lawrence set out to write her memoirs of her husband, some true light might be shed upon one of the strangest psychologies of his generation. She might have done inestimable service to the memory of her husband if she had set down with one-half of the frankness which he inspired in his friends the Lawrence whom she knew. That way, and that way only, could a memoir from her pen be important . . . to add to the understanding of genius, and of his genius in particular.

Instead, "Not I but the Wind" is disorganized, it gives no interpretation whatever to the subtle psychology of either Lawrence the author or Lawrence the man. It is more of a memoir of what his wife might like to remember about him than of a record of illuminating facts and actions. In it are included only a few letters to her, impersonal notes for the most part throwing no light on their relationship, and many letters to her mother and her sister, which, like most of the letters included in the volume of "Letters of D. H. Lawrence," edited by Aldous Huxley prove that Lawrence very rightly reserved his best writing for his creative work.

Indeed, the letters in "Not I but the Wind" are in most cases purely ephemeral, and add nothing to the understanding of Lawrence beyond the fact that his relationship with his mother-in-law was a tender one.

Of all the books written by those who knew him about Lawrence the man, "Not I but the Wind" seems to me to be the least illuminating, and it should have been the most.

Six short stories never previously published in book form and twelve chapters of an unfinished novel by D. H. Lawrence have just been published in a volume called "A Modern Lover" [Viking].

Hilton's "Lost Horizon" Issued in Prize Edition

James Hilton's "Lost Horizon" [Morrow], which was first published in this country last fall, has just been reissued in a new Hawthornden Prize Edition to celebrate the bestowal in England of the prize for "the best novel by an author under the age of forty published during 1933." The Hawthornden is England's most coveted literary award. Charles Morgan's "The Fountain" was the previous year's winner.

Mr. Quick Gets Fast Let-Down in Mystery Tale

BY MORTIMER QUICK.

In "Murder in Three Acts" [Doubleday-Doran] Agatha Christie turns her usual trick of writing a very readable and amusing story, but, my! how the denouement does let you down. In my opinion she hasn't built up her thesis to meet the contingency at all. You think and think as you read the final pages and manage to tear from the body of the book a few slight inklings of the astonishing solution, but they seem rather fortuitous and flung.

But don't let my grumblings keep you from reading the book. It is very sprightly and interesting and old Poirot hangs around being as mysterious as anything and letting all sorts of things happen under his elderly nose. The story is all about an actor manager, slipping from his prime, and his various associates, some few of whom get murdered right under your nose. But when you find out why you are going to be surprised and a little incredulous, unless I miss my guess.

Isabel Briggs Myers is one of those fabulous people who won a large prize for writing a first mystery story and now she comes along with a second, "Give Me Death" [Stokes]. Pretty nearly everybody in a family of southern extraction commits suicide, or maybe they do and maybe they don't. Anyway, you know why southerners, confronted by a shameful secret, feel called upon to kill themselves, so that element of the mystery will begin to clear itself fairly early in the game. But you do seem to get absorbed in finding out just how awful everything is, and there is a certain heatness in the handling of the story which is very satisfactory.

There isn't anybody of importance in the book who isn't thoroughly nice, or so you think up to the final chapter, and, sadly enough, they all get a very raw deal. Jerningham, the family friend, goes to the bottom of things assisted by one of those faithful friends who materialize inevitably within the orbit of criminal investigators. On the whole it is a very prettily planned if grisly tale, and each shock as it comes is both surprising and logical.

"Enter Murderers" [Doubleday-Doran] is an account by Edward Hale Bierstadt, in the Pearson manner, of eight ancient and desultory murders. Forgotten records are mulled over and dramatized into fairly interesting accounts of curious and quite unimportant deaths. None of the murderers are criminals and none except the famous Sickles, who knew himself an outraged husband, seemed to have any valid reason for their crimes, which, perhaps, is the most interesting feature of the collection.

Book Publisher Tells of Years with Authors

Grant Richards Presents Autobiography.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—It may be that the title, "Author Hunting," of Grant Richards' autobiography [Hamilton] will mislead those who would find the book very attractive. The book is the story of the life of an adventurous English publisher, who began business as a young man in 1898, and who was the first in England to publish for Frank Norris and Theodore Dreiser, the first publisher of G. K. Chesterton, John Masefield, Thomas Burke, Alec Waugh, and others.

It was he who published Shaw's two volumes, "Plays Pleasant and Unpleasant," and he who took over A. E. Housman's "A Shropshire Lad" when it might have gone out of print. He did a great deal of experimental work in publishing, and had contacts with many famous writers who either published or did not publish with him.

The autobiography tells candidly all about what Mr. Richards did to persuade these authors, and how he secured or missed their work; and it is full of letters to himself from some of the most famous men of the day. In particular it contains many excellent letters from Mr. Shaw, whose dealings with printers and others make the liveliest possible reading.

Covering nearly thirty years of modern English literature, the book is both interesting to read and a store of information; for Mr. Richards is a good writer, very intelligent, full of thrust and fun, and a man of the world. He was in his heyday a new kind of publisher, and evidence of that fact, which is to be found all through his book, makes it of unusual value and vividness. It will certainly be widely read in England.

Another autobiography, but of a very different kind, will presently see the light. This is the story of Sir Max Pemberton and is called "Reminiscences of Fifty years" [Hutchinson]. It is the work of a journalist and man of affairs whose experience has been peculiarly rich.

Sir Max began life as a journalist. He edited the famous boys' paper, Chums, and wrote for it his celebrated Stevensonian story, "The Iron Pirate." At the beginning of the century he was a very popular romancer. But his friendship for the late Lord Northcliffe kept him in journalism, and he is still there at the age of 71, writing as well as ever. He was a pioneer cyclist and then a pioneer motorist.

His biography of Royce, the engineer of the Rolls-Royce automobile and airplane, is published [Selwyn & Blount], and the autobiography will appear later in the season. It should be among the most varied and interesting works of its kind to be published in recent times, for Sir Max has an extraordinarily wide acquaintance with every kind of celebrated and interesting person, and the skill to give all these persons fresh life in his own pages.

The best selling novel throughout English in the last month has been Francis Brett Young's "The Little World"; the best selling work of nonfiction has been Peter Fleming's "One's Company" [Cape].

Predicts Moon Will Break and Prolong Moonlight

A time is coming when we shall have moonlight all night long. Not tomorrow night or the next night but when the moon breaks into pieces. It's a mathematical certainty, according to Sir James Jeans, whose new book, "Through Time and Space" [Macmillan], is to be published soon. In it he tells how and when.

Verses Poke Fun at Local Idiom of Texas Residents

"Sure Enough, How Come?" is the intriguing title of a little volume of verses guying the local idiom of Texas. F. W. Van Emden, who is a Dutch woman of charm and a bursting sense of humor, has lived in Texas for some years and, having been interested in diction [with six languages at her tongue's tip] the special Texanisms goaded her to the point of amused jingles.

Any one who has been baffled or startled by local phrases in Texas and even the natives will find "Sure Enough, How Come?" trenchant. Here's a sample called "Boarding House Hints for Newcomers from the East":

"Don't ask for MILK if buttermilk you cannot bear.
Or for POTATOES, when for sweet ones you don't care.
If you shun pork, don't say, "Just pass the MEAT to me."
. . . . . .
Corn on the cob, they named it ROASTING EAR.
You order corn, they'll CUT a can my dear!
Pass up the biscuits and it will be said:
You're from the EAST. I know you want LIGHT BREAD.

Here Is Proof That Sea Serpent Stories Are Not Just Stories

That old fraud [or so most of us think him] the much maligned and much written about sea serpent, at last has had a biographer come to his rescue and attempt to put him in a niche in the marine hall of fame. "The Case for the Sea Serpent," by Lieutenant Commander R. T. Gould [Putnam], just about proves that sea monsters do exist and at the same time supplies much interesting data regarding this much misunderstood and exaggerated subject. It's a book every lover of sea lore will want to own. It gives every well authenticated sea serpent story from 1740 to the 1934 version. It is a unique and worthwhile addition to marine literature.

LIBERIA REDISCOVERED

By JAMES C. YOUNG

Anybody who ever thought that all the adventure had gone out of business should read this book. Here is adventure in a far land practically untouched by the hand of man. Liberia, the Negro Republic in western Africa, was the spot selected by Harvey S. Firestone as the future source of rubber to free America of foreign domination. This is the absorbing account of a contest with the jungle to grow rubber in a country that has looked to the United States for protection throughout a hundred years. The author traces the history of this unique Republic from its early days until recent times; also the charges of slavery by an international commission and efforts by the League of Nations to correct Liberian governmental disorders. Every page discloses strange sights, customs and perils, just as though a reader looked across the Atlantic into the dark green wilds of Africa.

"The Newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and lead public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide." — Chicago Tribune.

AN ANNUAL EXPOSITION.

The remarkable success and manifold benefits achieved by A Century of Progress Exposition under the most unfavorable conditions have naturally raised the hope that a permanent annual institution may be established upon so splendid a foundation. THE TRIBUNE has expressed its faith in such an undertaking which it believes would be widely and in many worthy ways beneficial to Chicago and the nation. There is other influential opinion in its favor and, with the end of the Fair approaching, it should be crystalized in effective form.

There is no question of maintaining the Exposition upon the scale achieved in 1933 and 1934, but an annual summer event, within more modest and permanently practicable limits, could and should be added to the resources of the city and country. The foundation and central objective of a permanent or recurring summer exposition should be an agricultural and trade show. Chicago is the agricultural capital of the nation and long ago should have provided a center in which all the interests of agriculture, farming, horticulture, dairying, and cattle raising could be represented and assembled annually for the exchange of knowledge and advancement and for the instruction of the urban public. All branches of agricultural activity ought to have such a center. It is their need and also that of city dwellers.

Besides accommodations for agricultural interests there should be accommodations for industrial and commercial exhibits, a trade and industrial show which would keep the public in touch with the progress and accomplishments of private enterprise. If the extraordinary exhibitions of Ford, General Motors, Chrysler, and Firestone cannot be perpetuated, still they have illustrated with amazing skill what can be done even on a less ambitious scale.

As a background to these immediately practical concerns there should be a continuation of the exhibits of pure and applied science and invention on which the material progress of America and the world is founded. The crowds which visited the Hall of Science have proved beyond doubt the interest of the public in scientific activities.

Around this nucleus of instruction and organized practical activity in agriculture, commerce and industry there should be provision for wholesome entertainment, with plenty of good music and such varied entertainment as A Century of Progress has given.

We think such an enterprise can be established and will be supported by the public. It should be managed by a responsible commission of public spirited citizens who will protect it from perversion and develop it for the public good on the best lines of instruction and entertainment. There have been some forty million entrances during the two seasons of the Exposition, and a very large public drawn from a very wide region has shown appreciation of the opportunities offered. While the chief material returns may be to Chicago, which will have the responsibility for financing and maintaining an annual fair, the cultural benefits will be widespread. Even the material profits have not been confined to Chicago, as a recent inquiry is said to prove in Florida, where the state chamber of commerce had gas station attendants inquire of out of state patrons why they came to Florida. Nearly a third replied that they had been attracted by the Florida exhibit at A Century of Progress.

We think an enterprise within practicable limits but of a high quality could be made a permanent resource of the people and ought to be tried. A Century of Progress has left us an invaluable body of experience with which to build and the good will of millions who have learned what profits of knowledge and refreshment such an institution offers them.

RAILWAY LEADERSHIP.

The announcement of the Union Pacific railway that it will shortly initiate transcontinental passenger service from Los Angeles to New York via Chicago, with high speed, streamlined, motor driven Pullman trains, is epochal. The schedule of forty hours between Los Angeles and Chicago will be so arranged that the trip may be accomplished with the loss of a single business day, or, as others may view it, the loss of a single holiday from a vacation limited to two weeks' duration. Despite the enormous disparity in distance it will bring Los Angeles as close to Chicago as is Miami.

One disappointment mars the picture. Eastern lines refuse to handle the train between New York and Chicago at any greater speed than is now accomplished by the Century and Broadway. The train is to be held back to eighteen hours or thereabouts.

We have become accustomed to look to the eastern roads for leadership in speeds. Now a western road is setting the pace. Will the eastern roads accept the challenge to establish that absolute necessity of the future of overnight service between Chicago and New York?

BEARING FALSE WITNESS.

In the Voice of the People this morning will be found a letter from Prof. William M. Cain of the college of law of the University of Notre Dame. It is an extraordinary document, coming as it does from a man whose position should guarantee an ability and a willingness to appraise men and events calmly and judicially. Mr. Cain does neither. He adopts a style of argument which has become all too common in the ugly propaganda of the New Deal, a style of argument which presents the opposition as a monster and then seeks to win public favor by denouncing it.

Thus Prof. Cain speaks of the "supposed statement" by Gen. Johnson. He pretends that there is room to doubt that Gen. Johnson said that he had been in consultation with Judge Brandeis. Unfortunately for Mr. Cain the statement was made in a public address and was heard by hundreds of persons. There may be much doubt about the truth of the statement, but there can be none about the fact that it was made.

When Gen. Johnson made his statement he was head of the National Recovery administration, the most important of the New Deal agencies. He had been selected for that position by President Roosevelt himself. Gen. Johnson has been a far more important and influential personage in the administration than all but a few of the members of Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet. To pretend that the words of a man so highly placed, speaking in his official capacity before an important audience, carry no weight is simply silly. To characterize the publication of Gen. Johnson's remarks as rumor mongering is, if possible, even sillier.

Gen. Johnson may have borne false witness; but if it be presumed that he is an irresponsible liar, then what is to be said of all his other official acts, including the handling of hundreds of codes? Are they all tainted with dishonesty and irresponsibility? What, too, is to be said of the judgment of a President who selected such a character for the key position in his recovery administration? Prof. Cain has presented a line of argument which admirers of the New Deal will find more than a little embarrassing.

Only two people could, in the nature of things, tell authoritatively what Mr. Brandeis did or did not do for the recovery administration, and Prof. Cain, despite his certainty about the matter, is not one of them. One was Gen. Johnson and the other Mr. Justice Brandeis. Johnson has spoken. He says the judge was consulted. Mr. Brandeis has not spoken. It does not follow that he is not in a position to deny the general's statement or that he will not eventually deny it, but certainly it is difficult to believe that in maintaining silence he has been well advised.

A statement which reflects upon the judge's conduct has been made openly by one of the higher officials of the government. Here is no idle gossip, undeserving of notice, but a forthright statement made by a first rank official in the performance of his duties as a spokesman for the administration. A justice of the Supreme court ought to hold himself aloof from political controversy, but there is no canon of judicial ethics which requires him to remain silent under so direct a charge from so important a personage. As a man whose honor has been attacked a judge can, like any other man, defend himself without loss of dignity.

Mr. Cain implies that THE TRIBUNE has borne false witness in this matter. He cannot prove that charge. THE TRIBUNE has at no time said or suggested that Gen. Johnson spoke the truth. Neither, for that matter, have we said or suggested that he did not speak the truth. As for Dean Lee, he also reserved judgment.

But not Prof. Cain. He can believe for his convenience that Gen. Johnson did not say what he did say. He can call the general's public statement a rumor and therefore he can denounce those who discuss it. He can go on from there to discover the base motives which must have inspired the rumor mongering. Having started from a conveniently false premise, he ends up by accusing those who oppose the New Deal of character assassination and invents a plot by them to discredit if not destroy the Supreme court as a means to their end.

It may be a kindness to Prof. Cain to remind him that it was not the enemies of the New Deal but Gen. Johnson, a principal protagonist of the New Deal, who made the remark about Mr. Brandeis. Starting his discussion from that point, Prof. Cain will be in less danger of bearing false witness in future.

Editorial of the Day

AGAINST PROPAGANDA GOVERNMENT.

[Post-Standard, Syracuse, N. Y.]

Newspapers of the United States several months ago waged a vigorous fight for absolute recognition of the freedom of the press. Now they must wage another battle against government by propaganda.

Elisha Hanson, Washington attorney and representative of the American Newspaper Publishers' association, warns that the American press today is facing a greater emergency than it has faced in any period of its history. It must fight against government propaganda to give American newspaper readers the true, uncolored, unbiased, strictly accurate news of government activities.

Every department and every bureau in Washington he shows is developing special publicity staffs, to give out news. Naturally, the information handed out by such government paid staffs is favorable to them. They must, by their very nature, be colored. In this way only news approved by the head of the department or bureau is made available.

It is, actually and directly, an evasion of the freedom of the press guaranteed by the constitution. Favorable news is made available, unfavorable news is withheld. The American newspaper reader today gets straightforward, accurate news. It is plain to be seen, however, that newspapers will be prevented from getting the plain, unvarnished facts if these bureaus and publicity divisions are to control.

It is essential to good government in this country that both sides of the story be told. If the American people are to judge, they must know both the good and the bad points of any policy or program. Then, after the policy has been weighed, public opinion will be brought to bear; it will be supported or condemned. The bad will be forced out, the good will be retained.

The growth of publicity bureaus in governmental offices is, as Mr. Hanson asserts, a distinct and growing menace. Government policies should stand or fall by their own weight alone. There should be no misleading of public opinion to obtain support of any policy. Skilled advertising men and news writers are not needed in government offices to "sell" the government to the people. The people should be the judge and should judge only on actual, unvarnished facts.

The newspapers of the country are entitled to all the news and are ready and willing to fight against this new incubus, to the end that the people of the country also shall receive all the news.

THEY'RE GOING to fuse a twenty-five cent piece in the bottom of every whisky bottle. You pay a quarter more for the whisky, but the idea is that when you've swallowed the licker you'll break the bottle to get your quarter back. And if the bottle is broken the sly old bootlegger can't get it to refill again. It's a good idea, but suppose pa needs a quarter mighty bad and the only one around the house is the one in an opened bottle of whisky. Certainly, and by the time he's drunk himself down to that quarter he's consumed four dollars' worth of whisky to recover twenty-five cents. And then, too, after drinking that quart pa will forget what he wanted the quarter for.

WHEN YOU SEE A MAN fidgeting around these days of late October you can't tell whether he's a Republican nervous over the election or a man who has just put on his woolly winter unnerwears.

WANTA LAY MY HEAD.

Wanta lay my head on the ground and howl
When the wind blows in this fall time!

Nothin' on the pantry shelf to show,
Nothin' to put in the jars and glasses,

Empty spring and empty summer,
Hard old winter starin' me in the face,
Screechin' and mourning 'round the place.

Calls up all them worryin' troubles
Thought I'd buried good and deep;
Ain't no bother fer them to find me,
Ruin my day and ha'nt my sleep.

Wanta lay my head on the ground and howl

KATE HAWORTH.

"ALL MOTORISTS STOPPED and Questioned in Search for Robinson."—Headline. And I am going down to Turkey run in Indiana. Heavens, I hope I don't look like the man who kidnaped Mrs. Stoll. I worked such a long time twisting my face around so that I wouldn't look like Dillinger that now my face seems set in a sort of weird expression that may be like that of Robinson. I think I have now got my face frozen into such a shape that it doesn't look at all like the pictures of Robinson. I look more like a bank robber or a bomb thrower. And, of course, there's danger in this. The police may nab me on suspicion that I'm either one or the other. Still, I'd rather be picked up for bank robbery or bomb throwing than for kidnaping. But after another long look in the glass I've about decided I'll not drive in the old family bus down into Indiana after all. I've twisted my face around until I'm sure I don't look like Robinson, but as I gaze on it in the mirror I think I see a strong resemblance to Pretty Boy Nelson that they're hunting for all around these parts. Home is the safest place these day—even if one has a noble nature and a heart of gold he may look like a murderer or a chicken thief. One can't help one's looks.

A FALSE ALARM.

I could scarcely believe my ears. The sound that came over the morning air was distinctly like the rat-a-tat of a hammer. Then I seemed to detect the hum of a handsaw singing its way through a board. Bareheaded and breathless I ran out and gazed up and down the street. Nothing. Probably I had suffered a depression delusion. But no. In front of Silas Gray's house was a pile of new lumber, and as I gaped at it the seductive music came again, nearer and nearer. Somewhere back of Silas' house there was a carpenter at work! Building something! It has been years since the symphony of saw and hammer was last heard in our town, or anything but the racket of automobiles, more rattly each season, and the occasional challenge of an airplane overhead. Excited neighbors began to appear in doorways. Little children who had never in their lives heard such strange sounds before clung to their mothers' skirts.

"It's down at Silas Gray's," I shouted. "There are men at work—carpenters—builders!"

Soon there was a general stampede in the direction of Gray's house. Not only would it be a novelty to see men at work, but it would be most heartening.

"Sounds like the knell of the depression," panted Squire Long at my side. "Confidence is shorely being restored." Scores of us—men, women, and children—swarmed across Silas Gray's front lawn. Silas, a retired and somewhat withered farmer, came around the house to meet us.

"Neighbor Gray," spoke Squire Long, "we've just heard you're building an addition and we dropped around to congratulate you as a man of foresight and courage, with backbone enough to buck this here depression and give employment to our unemployed. It means better times for our community. Let's give three cheers for Silas Gray." And we gave them.

"Well, friends," replied Silas slowly, "what I'm doin' ain't so much maybe, but I reckon it will help out some. You see, Jim Jones, who used to be a carpenter, owed me a bill. So I decided to let him work it out on a little improvement." The crowd followed Silas around to the back yard. Jim, too busy to look up, was erecting a new pig pen on the alley.

"Don't aim to," said Silas. "You see, I've joined up with the AAA and this here new pen is for the pigs I promised the government not to raise."

PREVENTABLE MENTAL DISEASE.

We all recognize the close relationship that exists between physical and mental health, and we may paraphrase the old saying, "A sane mind in a sound body."

Students of insanity recognize that mental disease may arise from organic causes, the evidence of which is manifested by actual and visible changes in the brain itself. On the other hand, certain mental derangements may exist with no evidence of organic disease whatsoever. Such conditions are called functional.

No one has defined exactly what the mind is, but we do know that the mind receives impressions through the sense organs and these may be pleasant or quite the reverse. Impressions create a state of mind, and their effect upon the individual and their influence upon his conduct and his thinking will depend upon his environment, his education, the attitude of those about him, and the state of his general health.

One of the most important causes of organic mental disease is syphilis. This disease accounts for 15 per cent or more of all cases admitted to hospitals for the insane and is attended with a well nigh incalculable economic loss. The disability and suffering that accompany it can scarcely be comprehended.

Second among the organic causes of insanity may be listed the psychoses induced by the excessive and persistent use of alcohol. Although but 6 per cent of the admissions to hospitals for the insane are definitly ascribed to alcohol, yet this drug is by most authorities held responsible directly or indirectly for 25 per cent of cases of mental deterioration.

In the third group of exciting factors of organic insanity must be mentioned diseases of the circulatory system. High blood pressure with destruction of capillaries and narrowing and plugging of important blood vessels may lead to decreased circulation in the brain and hence to mental symptoms.

Syphilis is a disease of which we know the cause, the methods of prevention, and the mode of cure. With proper and rigorous preventive measures on the part of city, state, and nation the disease could be practically eliminated in a dozen years. Vice conditions keep alive sources of infection, and the weak and uninformed are exposed to this terrible menace.

Rome fell under the scourge of malaria. If modern civilization is to advance or even survive, much more rigorous measures will be required to stem the tide of syphilitic infections. Insanity is only one of the terminal stages of the disease. There are other phases of its ravages equally disabling.

If the nation could be trained away from the immoderate use of alcohol, a reduction in the number of psychoses would be rather promptly observed. Particularly should this training apply to the period of early manhood and womanhood when the nervous system is especially susceptible to the action of toxins. Naturally enough the weakest nervous systems exhibit the grossest manifestations of lack of control. Such nervous mechanisms are more easily damaged. In other words, those with stable nervous systems control the use of alcohol. The unstable individual may succumb to its excessive use.

Circulatory disease is in a very positive way influenced by both syphilis and alcohol. Nevertheless, infections play an important part and sometimes mental deterioration occurs following damage to the blood vessels.

We may safely say then that the control of some of the most important phases of mental disease lies within the scope of public health. When the individual will not or cannot protect himself; when thereby he becomes a menace to others, organized society must intervene.

CHILD'S GUMS SORE.

J. M. M. writes: My 11 year old daughter has trouble with her gums. They swell and are sore. A dentist advised using cod liver oil, which we have done, but the trouble persists. She seems in good health otherwise and is not underweight.

REPLY.

Probably your daughter is suffering from some food deficiency. Swollen and sore gums in a young person is a symptom of scurvy. She should continue taking cod liver oil and use oranges and lemons in addition.

The condition could also be what is known as stomatitis. This is usually a fungus growth that may show itself at various points inside the mouth. The gums may also be affected. Gargling with sodium perborate will relieve the condition.

PERSPIRES IN SLEEP.

Mrs. L. G. J. writes: For about the first hour after my 3½ year old daughter falls asleep she perspires very much on her face as well as her body. She also sleeps with her eyes partly open and clears her throat quite a bit. What could cause the above symptoms? She had pyelitis when she was seven months old. She seems in good health now except that she takes cold easily. She is 43 inches tall and weighs 41 pounds.

REPLY.

Perspiration is sometimes a fatigue phenomenon. There is a let-up or relaxation of the nervous control of the blood vessels of the skin with resulting engorgement and stimulation of the sweat glands. This condition is sometimes a manifestation of toxemia.

Does her temperature go up in the late afternoon or evening? Is the urine now free from pus cells?

Failure to entirely close the upper lids is not uncommon and usually means little in relation to the general health.

SANITARIUM BEST.

Mrs. I. R. P. writes: Is there any treatment that can be taken for the cure of the liquor habit when the will power seems to be entirely gone?

REPLY.

INCOME FROM ESTATE.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Please advise in the following matter: There are a brother [60 years old], a sister [68 years old], and a niece by a half-brother. Since the death of their father thirty years ago the sister has been handling the affairs of an [1] estate in Germany, which pays money quarterly in which the three people named share. 2. The sister is self-appointed administratrix. 3. When payments are due from Germany she receives a draft which she deposits in her own account and then issues personal checks to the others. Last April she sent a check to the niece, but none to the brother. We don't know the particulars of the estate and must take her word for its condition. If she should die the other two people would be absolutely at a loss as to how handle these affairs. 4. Is there some way she can be made to give all the particulars about the estate? J. H. K.

1. You do not state whether the deceased left a will, nor whether there are court proceedings.

2. It is not clear just what you mean by this expression. An administratrix is appointed only by a court.

3. You can try asking the parties in Germany to give you information as to the estate.

4. If you had no way of getting in touch with the estate in Germany we would advise you to employ an attorney here to try to force matters.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT

LEGAL SERVICES.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Is it possible to get a lawyer who would undertake a case free of charge? Are there lawyers who are willing to take a case if the court fees are paid? This case involves an accident which happened four years ago in which a little girl had an arm broken. 2. The doctor's bill has not been paid in full and he is planning to sue. P. T.

1. If the chances of collecting look good you should be able to find an attorney who would handle the case for a share in the collection. In proper circumstances other cases are handled by the legal aid bureau of the United Charities.

2. If you mean to ask about the employment of an attorney to defend against the doctor's effort to collect his bill, we see no reason why the legal aid bureau or a private attorney should serve you without charge. You state no facts showing that you have any defense.

COLLATERAL LOAN.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I borrowed $75 from a loan company for three months, with the privilege of renewing it when due by paying the interest. I have renewed it several times now. The last time I renewed it they would give me but two months and asked me peculiar questions. It is due in September. I gave them a $500 bond for security. 1. I am afraid they will sell my bond. They won't accept my interest any more. 2. Can they do that? 3. If they can by law, don't they have to give me all over their money? I do not want to dispose of my bond. 4. What is your best advice in this matter? W. G. M.

1. On an ordinary collateral loan the creditor has no right to sell the collateral unless there is a default. You state no facts as to a default nor do you give us the wording of your papers.

2. Your statement that they have done it is an exact answer to the question you ask. They could not take advantage of this as a created default if that is what you mean to ask.

3. We do not understand the question.

4. See preceding answers.

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph. D.

The Mayfly is called the "animal that lives but a day." This insect may emerge from the "grub" stage under water, take to its wings, mate and die—all within the space of a few hours. It builds no home, eats no food, drinks no water [in fact, it has no mouth], and does not even live to see its own offspring. Its existence seems to be only for it to reproduce itself and die. Its eggs, which are laid under water, hatch into "grubs" which live in the water for about three years before emerging as adults. This insect is abundant about streams and bodies of water in the spring and early summer.

BEARING FALSE WITNESS.

Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 13.—It is to be very much regretted that upon the flimsy evidence of a supposed statement of Gen. Hugh Johnson your newspaper in its recent news item assumed that Associate Justice Brandeis of the United States Supreme court had been in consultation with the general concerning the National Recovery acts of congress. It is, also, to be regretted that Dean Lee of John Marshall Law school should recklessly assume the groundless rumor that THE TRIBUNE set afoot to be true and make it the occasion and excuse for a discourse upon judicial ethics as he seems to have done in THE TRIBUNE of the 11th instant. Now just what is there to this whole matter?

No one disputes the proposition that for any member of the Supreme court to express any opinion upon the wisdom, validity, interpretation or application of any act of congress not passed upon by the Supreme court would be highly unethical. Nor does any lawyer doubt that, if any judge should utter an opinion upon any of those points in advance of a hearing in open court, he would be disqualified to sit in judgment. These considerations are elementary and are not open to denial or debate. The only question about the matter is one of fact—not ethics—and I, as a member of the bar, deny that Justice Brandeis, or any other member of the Supreme court, has expressed any opinion upon any question which may come before him in his judicial capacity. The burden rests upon THE TRIBUNE and Dean Lee to prove this grave charge, and neither of you has any such evidence. One would think that a newspaper of the standing of THE TRIBUNE would hesitate before making such an insinuation against any member of our Supreme court.

The mere fact—if, indeed, it be a fact—that the emotional Gen. Johnson said that he had been in consultation with Justice Brandeis is certainly insufficient to justify any one in believing it to be true. Many years ago I had the honor to make the acquaintance of Justice Brandeis and found him to be a high minded lawyer of extraordinary ability. It happened that we then had a long talk, and, among other things, discussed this very matter of judicial ethics; and it is simply unthinkable that he would so far depart from the rigid rule he then declared. Of course that was before he became a member of the highest tribunal in our land.

It is well known that in the Nebbia case, involving the constitutional validity of the milk control act of the state of New York, and the Minnesota moratorium case, the Supreme court sustained the validity of those acts by a vote of 5 to 4, and that Justice Brandeis was of the majority. It is obvious that those who were not pleased with those decisions might welcome any fancied fact that might tend to disqualify one of the five, and might even dignify a rumor to that effect by publishing it. The implications are not hard to discover. By adopting such a practice it would become possible to disqualify all the judges and thereby paralyze the functions of our Supreme court and the important questions pending before them would be undecided. The court cannot be silenced by any such tactics, but will continue to function.

FROM THE FEDERALIST.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—Lately I have been intensely interested in reading some things relating to the adoption of the United States constitution. In reading a portion of the Federalist the other day I ran across the following, which seemed particularly appropriate in connection with questions arising in relation to the New Deal:

"This independence of the [federal] judges is equally requisite to guard the constitution and the rights of individuals from the effects of those ill humors which the arts of designing men, or the influence of particular conjunctures, sometimes disseminate among the people themselves and which, though they speedily give place to better information and more deliberate reflection, have a tendency in the meantime to occasion dangerous innovations in the government and serious oppressions of the minor party in the community.

"Though I trust the friends of the proposed constitution will never concur with its enemies in questioning the fundamental principle of republican government, which admits the right of the people to alter or abolish the established constitution whenever they find it inconsistent with their happiness, yet it is not to be inferred from this principle that the representatives of the people, whenever a momentary inclination happens to lay hold of a majority of their constituents incompatible with the provisions in the existing constitution, would, on that account, be justifiable in a violation of those provisions, or that the courts would be under a greater obligation to connive at infractions in this shape than when they had proceeded wholly from the cabals of the representative body. Until the people have, by some solemn and authoritative act, annulled or changed the established form, it is binding upon themselves, collectively as well as individually, and no presumption or even knowledge of their sentiments can warrant their representatives in a departure from it prior to such an act. But it is easy to see that it would require an uncommon portion of fortitude in the judges to do their duty as faithful guardians of the constitution where legislative invasions of it had been instigated by the major voice of the community."

There is so much of interest in the Federalist applicable to the current revival of interest in the constitution that I want to offer the suggestion to your paper that it run the Federalist in serial form, and thus help to acquaint the public with some of the questions that were in the minds of the people at the time the constitution was adopted.

REYNOLDS DENIES RELIEF WORKERS PROLONGING JOBS

Funds Low, Chief Tells Staf at Rally.

An overflow crowd of more than 7,000 relief staf employés and members of their families last night heard Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, deny "in spirit and in fact" the charge that some workers are trying to make their jobs permanent. The massmeeting was held in the Naval Reserve armory at the foot of Randolph street.

"We believe funds are available for the next few months, but after that we don't know what the situation will be," Mr. Reynolds warned the pay rollers. "I feel sure that no one in this hall is guilty of administering relief with the idea of perpetuating his job.

Urged to Watch Rolls.

"I deny the charge in spirit and in fact. I know we all are agreed that every relief family with one or more employable members should be taken off the rolls as soon as work is obtained. We in the central executive office can't determine when this situation arrives—it is your job."

With Mr. Reynolds' appearance on the platform, the audience rose without prompting. After Leo M. Lyons, relief administrator for Cook county, referred to him as "one who needs no introduction to any social work group," Mr. Reynolds began what he termed an "intimate talk."

Praises Workers—at First.

He had fulsome praise for the relief workers at first, lauding their work as part of "the greatest enterprise in Illinois and Cook county." Later, however, he touched the serious facts regarding outpouring of public funds, and asserted that expenditures have increased greatly and case loads some since August, 1933. In this same period, he reminded the staf employés, the employment index has risen from 58 to 72.

"I believe you have done well," he concluded, "but I believe you can do better."

The speeches were interspersed with classical numbers and marches played by two bands whose members are supported by relief funds. Later there were a half dozen vaudeville acts put on by performers employed on special relief projects.

BUSINESS HOUSES RALLY TO SUPPORT COMMUNITY FUND

Workers Pleased with Co-operation Shown.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

The 1934 Community fund so far has met the most extensive and whole hearted coöperation from business concerns in the whole five years of the private charity fund's existence, it was disclosed yesterday at the first report luncheon of the trades and industries division in the Palmer house. This is one of the money raising groups active in behalf of the Community fund, which is seeking $3,000,000 to finance 130 private charities in the city.

In less than a week, the division workers reported, 2,818 concerns or employers have assumed responsibility for organizing 258,557 employés as contributors to the fund. In most cases, employés are asked to contribute at least a half day's pay a month for six months, the amount to be deducted and turned over to the fund by the employer.

On three mammoth blackboards behind the speakers' table was recorded progress of each trade or industry as chairmen, all high officials in their own companies, read off facts and figures.

Clarence B. Randall, chairman of the division, said that the next report meeting Oct. 31, should give an even more remarkable story of the readiness of Chicago's employed to come to the aid of their less fortunate neighbors.

More than $1,150,000 has been raised by the special gifts division, another money raising group for the fund, Fred A. Preston, general chairman of the fund campaign, announced.

Samuel A. Goldsmith, executive of the Jewish Charities, said a half million persons went through the institutions and organizations allied with the community fund last year.

Operate on Mayor's Son for Removal of Appendix

The problem of how to enlist the aid of the dental profession and still retain control of dental care for indigents was placed by the Illinois Emergency Relief commission in the hands of Chairman Robert J. Dunham and Executive Secretary W. S. Reynolds at a meeting yesterday.

With authority from the commission to act as they see fit in the matter, Chairman Dunham and Secretary Reynolds will probably carry through the arrangements they had made before the meeting. They plan the appointment of an advisory committee made up of four members of "organized dentistry"—the Illinois State Dental society and the Chicago Dental society.

The action was taken despite a strong plea for safeguards against control of public expenditures by the private organizations, voiced by Dr. Joseph G. Berkowitz, president of United States Medical Service, Inc., a low cost medical and dental clinic. Corporation Counsel William H. Sexton, a commission member, opposed the proposals recommended yesterday but said he had complete confidence in Mr. Dunham.

The members of the advisory committee are Dr. J. C. Waddell of East St. Louis and Dr. Emil A. Anderson, Dr. D. M. Gallie, Sr., and Dr. Frank J. Hurlstone, all of Chicago.

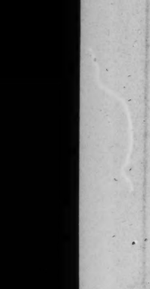
NEW DEAL AGENT ASKS RADIO CHAIN INVASION BY U. S.

Communication Group Is Astounded by Plan.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Invasion by the federal government of a new field of private enterprise was urged here this afternoon by a New Deal agent, Dr. Floyd W. Reeves, personal director of the Tennessee Valley authority, urged government ownership, operation, and control of a national broadcasting system to compete with existing chains.



DR. FLOYD W. REEVES.

His frank proposal of a government ownership of a powerful agency of communication came as a surprise at a meeting of the broadcast division of the federal communications commission. The commission was meeting to consider allocation of 25 per cent of an air chain's facilities for religious and educational facilities when Dr Reeves expounded his program.

Outlines His Plan.

He suggested government ownership and operation of a nation-wide system of radio stations giving full time coverage of the entire country through suitable allocations of frequencies. He added that such frequencies be allocated with a view to as little disruption of present commercial broadcasting facilities as possible.

Federal financing with control of programs under the direction of a committee from foremost nonprofit educational and cultural agencies to be designated by President Roosevelt were advocated by Dr. Reeves. He said facilities should be available to nonprofit organizations, including government departments for educational and cultural programs.

Commission Goes Into Huddle.

His proposals caused the three members of the broadcast division, Eugene O. Sykes, Hampson Cary, and Thad H Brown to put their heads together in a hurried conference. Observers saw in the evident surprise of the commissioners recollection of the charges made last spring by Thomas D. Schall, blind Republican senator from Minnesota, that the New Dealers are seeking control of the press and radio to halt all opposition to their programs. Senator Schall drew a rebuke from the President for his charges.

After a short pause Mr. Sykes asked what channels would be used and Mr. Brown inquired into the cost of such a system. Dr. Reeves dismissed the questions with a wave of his hand, saying the details had not yet been gone into. He said the cost might be borne by imposing fees on radio sets.

Former U. of C. Professor.

Dr. Reeves, formerly professor of education at the University of Chicago, said radio should be free from the influence of advertising and that freedom of speech should be insured by elimination of commercial as well as political pressure.

"Could the committee of control you suggest deny the air to one speaker or another?" Mr. Sykes asked.

"In such cases the speaker could use existing commercial facilities," Dr Reeves answered.

"Would you have the committee change with every administration?" Mr. Brown questioned.

"In my personal judgment," Reeves answered bruskly, "no."

At the conclusion of his testimony Dr. Reeves was asked by newspaper men if he spoke for the TVA. He said he did. He also said he spoke for the TVA triumvirate, Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, Dr. Harcour A. Morgan, and David E. Lilienthal.

VON KLUCK, WHO NEARLY CAPTURED PARIS, DIES AT 88

Awed Germany by March on French Capital.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 19.—Gen. Alexander von Kluck, whose army almost captured Paris, died at his home today. He was 88 years old.

To his dying day the aged field marshal was convinced Germany would have taken the French capital, won the battle of the Marne and the world war if orders to retreat had not been conveyed to him by the mysterious Lieut. Col. Hentsch, on the staf of the supreme command.

The controversy is still raging in Germany over who gave the orders to retreat. Hentsch is dead and historians believe that definite proof on what really happened at the headquarters of Von Moltke, who is supposed to have given the orders to Hentsch, will never be known.

Germans Thrilled by March.

Germans of the old school of patriotism still are thrilled as they recall the days when the forces of Von Kluck, as commander of the German first army in the west, were "sweeping westward of Paris."

Official bulletins on Sept. 3, 1914, reported Von Kluck's position. Jubilation in Germany was great. Then the field marshal received orders to retreat.

The battle of the Marne followed and the German hopes of capturing the French capital were smashed. Von Kluck retreated to the Aisne positions. He was seriously wounded by shrapnel on March 29, 1915, while surveying his army's positions in the front line trenches. He was forced to give up his command and was placed on the retired list in October, 1916.

Awarded Iron Cross.

The warrior was born a commoner. He was the son of Karl Kluck, an architect. After his education he joined the army as a volunteer. At 20 he was an officer and served in the Austro-Prussian war of 1866. He also saw active service in the Franco-Prussian war. He was twice wounded near Metz.

His military exploits attracted the attention of the duke of Saxe-Meiningen, who recommended him to Kaiser Wilhelm I. His promotions then came rapidly. In 1909 Kaiser Wilhelm II. conferred upon him the rank of noble. He held a number of commanding posts and was later transferred to Berlin as inspector general.

He was 68 years old by that time and was slated for an early retirement. The name of Von Kluck was little known outside of Germany until the first 30 days of the world war when his army swept through Belgium and almost up to the gates of Paris.

WOMAN OF 84 BURIED AS BAND PLAYS GAY TUNES

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 19.—(AP)—A band played "The Sidewalks of New York" and "Wearin' of the Green" at the funeral of an 84 year old woman here today, in accordance with a request she made before death.

For 16 years Mrs. Margaret Murphy, a resident of the Jackson county home, had been saving the money she made as housekeeper in parish houses so she could be buried in the casket and the shroud she had selected, and to have a band to play "lively tunes."

"I hope to find the happiness in death I have not known for years, and I want to start that way," she had said.

Policeman Shot by Two Gunmen on West Side

Policeman John Siernicki, 37 years old, of 2414 North Linder avenue, attached to the Cragin station, was shot in the left leg last night by two gunmen, in front of a drug store at Kostner and Armitage avenues. Policeman Siernicki was on duty there when the two men got out of a car nearby. As soon as they saw the officer, both opened fire and then fled. Siernicki was taken to the Danish American hospital, where it was said his wound was not serious.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farm

By Bob Becker

Barn Made Snug

October 19, 1934.

THE horses that are kept in the big barn not far from Herman Guenther's house don't have to worry about the cold breezes of the approaching winter, because their quarters have been remodeled and made snug during the last few weeks. The barn in which these work horses are kept has been strengthened by the construction of a strong concrete wall around two sides and the whole structure put into excellent shape. The result is a stronger as well as warmer building. At the south end of this barn the work horses have their stalls. The north end was open last winter because cattle were fed in a yard outside and they could come and go inside as they pleased. In the loft are stored many tons of hay.

John Rawlings, who is in charge of the poultry on the auxiliary farm near Wheaton, has been busy sorting out his turkeys and Muscovy ducks because it is his plan to dispose of a limited number of each for breeding purposes. He has had such good luck with these fowls that he now has more birds than he wants to keep. Therefore he is going to sell a limited number of Bourbon Red turkey gobblers [hatched in the spring] suitable for breeding purposes, and also a few Muscovy ducks, which have had a big increase this season.

While the boys on the experimental farm are busy with the soy bean crop and putting corn in the shock, there is one job at Clarence Thurow's house being rushed toward completion before the next rain or snowfall. Clarence's cistern is being repaired and enlarged so that the home will have plenty of soft water this winter. Although there is a constant supply of well water that could be pumped for domestic uses, Clarence says that rain water is best for many purposes, and he is insuring a supply of it by repairing the cistern.

It's rather interesting that on Nov. 8, 1860, Joseph C. Medill, then editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and for many years the guiding force of this newspaper, wrote that a good farm cistern is worth its cost every time. Mr. Medill was writing a series of practical articles on the farm in the years 1860 and 1861. On Nov. 8 he discussed the value of a good cistern to a farmer and advised that autumn was the time to build or repair cisterns.

In this article, published in the fall of 1860, Mr. Medill said among other things:

"From your roofs you can always fill cisterns, if you have them, and there lay up a store of water for a dry time. It is estimated that a barn 30 by 40 feet supplies annually from its roof 900 barrels. A cistern 10 feet in diameter and 9 feet deep will hold 168 barrels."

ESTATE OF MRS. N. F. M'CORMICK TAXED $2,646,000

Taxes totaling $2,646,137 have been paid on the estate of Mrs. Nettie Fowler McCormick, philanthropist and widow of Cyrus Hall McCormick, who died in 1923 leaving an estate originally appraised at $8,696,000.

This was revealed yesterday when Walter W. L. Meyer, assistant to the Probate judge, approved the first accounting of the executors, Cyrus H. and Harold F. McCormick and Mrs. Anita Blaine, children of Mrs. McCormick. The accounting covers the period from 1923 to 1934.

It revealed that the total receipts from the personal estate were $5,144,030.95, of which $5,098,985.74 had been disbursed according to terms of the will, leaving a residue of $45,045.21.

The state inheritance tax took $1,198,058 from the estate. The federal tax was $1,080,000, personal property taxes totaled $100,000, and the New York state tax was $268,079, the accounting set forth.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Eugene Semples and George Roberts, burglary, sentenced to one year to life each in the penitentiary; John Krivak and John Klemiski, robbery, sentenced to one to 20 years in the penitentiary by Judge Denis E. Sullivan.

Andrew Dancho, robbery, sentenced to one year to life in the penitentiary by Judge Cornelius Harrington.

Wallie Sawabinski, robbery, sentenced to one year to life in the penitentiary; Joseph Scarpinato, robbery, sentenced to life in the penitentiary under the habitual criminal act; Joseph Kent, burglary, sentenced to one year to life in the penitentiary by Judge Harry B. Miller.

Mrs. Lucille Carey, 24 years old, 517 West 42d place, mother of four children, whose 4 year old daughter, Jeanne, was burned to death early Thursday while playing with matches in her home at a time when the mother admitted she was attending an all night beer party, was held by the juvenile authorities last night following an inquest into the death of the baby.

Mrs. Carey, whose husband, Thomas, is in the Joliet penitentiary for burglary, was arraigned before Judge Frank H. Bicek in the Juvenile court yesterday on the charge of contributing to the dependency of her children. Her case was set for hearing on Oct. 30. She was sent to the county jail, being unable to furnish $1,500 bonds. Her three children, ranging in age from 1 to 3 years, have been placed in St. Vincent's orphanage.

James Murphy, 57 years old, 512 West 43d street, was charged with disorderly conduct and will be arraigned in the Stockyards court today. It was in his home that the beer party was said to have been held.

The coroner's jury censured the Illinois relief commission for not making a more thorough investigation of its clients. Mrs. Carey was receiving relief.

WOMEN CALLED HOPE OF CHURCH IN MODERN DAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Importance of the work of women in Christianity was the main emphasis of today's sessions of the international convention of the Disciples of Christ. Speaking before more than 5,000 delegates assembled here Mrs. Ora L. Shepherd, national missions leader, pointed to women as saviors of the Christian church. She also appealed for additional feminine leadership and opportunities of participation in ecclesiastical councils.

After reviewing the relationship of women to the Christian cause from the time of Christ to the present day, Mrs. Shepherd added cogency to her argument by citing statistics bearing on the personal wealth of American women.

TRIALS IN TRAFIC COURT HEARD BY RADIO AUDIENCE

Proceedings of the Chicago Trafic court were broadcast for the first time yesterday from the police building at 11th and State street.

Henceforth, for fifteen minutes daily, trials in the court will be broadcast with the radio audience being able to hear the defendents' explanations, the prosecution by Assistant State's Attorney James Flanigan and Judge John Gutknecht's sentences.

Yesterday's defendants were all charged with speeding or failing to stop at through streets or stop lights. The judge gave each a lecture on safety and assessed moderate fines. Most were first offenders.

Mayor Kelly opened the court with a talk on safety. "The maiming and killing of Chicago citizens must stop," he said. "We ask the coöperation of all persons in making Chicago the safest city in the world. Watch other drivers, for they may not be as expert as you." Chief Justice Stonsteby also spoke.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

A coiffure designed by a Chicago stylist that is admirably suited to the mature woman with graying hair. It has a conservative distinction and is as becoming as it is smart.

It isn't nearly as difficult to impart individuality to the coiffure for the sweet young thing as it is to give a distinctive and at the same time smart touch to the hairdo of the matron. When you look 'em over the hair styles nowadays are a lot like the hats. Some of the bonnets are just plain goofy—off heads. Perch them above the pert face of a smartly garbed young girl and they're so chic they're breath-taking.

And some of the smart hair styles are a little bit on the goofy side, too. But the girl who can wear the most extreme of them is in luck. If she's the type and has the face and the flair that turn sheer giddiness into the height of style she's among the most blessed of Eve's daughters.

Going gay, either in hair or in hats, after you've said a reluctant farewell to thirty is a thousand times more difficult. The line between the cute and the comic can be very thin.

But style can be there. It's got to be there if you'd hold your head up among your sisters. The time when the woman with gray or graying hair and contours that reveal at least a little of what is slangily known as "mileage" was automatically given a safe and duly sane hair style is past. She can have hair chic, too, but of a rather dignified type.

A Chicago hair stylist who excells in such coiffures has demonstrated this repeatedly for us. The hair style shown above, for example, is beautifully adapted to the graying hair of its wearer. It is soft, but not soppy; there's plenty of dramatic style in the height at the left side and in the sweep across the back. And when the hair has one of those lavender rinses that we passionately adore for streaked or all gray hair it's a knock-out achievement of conservative distinction.

Good Morning!

"The Gay Divorcée" provides a gay hour!

This adaptation of the stage show—whose title was spelled with ONE "e" instead of two—is a sparkling, music peppered, dance punctuated proposition, in which everybody does swell work, and Fred Astaire—he played in the original production—hands you the surprise of your life.

You'd think he MIGHT have been lonesome, and sort of loose ends, after his sister Adele deserted their act to marry into the nobility. But, ha, ha! get that idea right our of your heads! Whatever sorrow separation caused him, it DIDN'T cramp his style.

You know he can dance, so we won't go into that. But DID you know that he can sing? And put over a romantic lead with so much aplomb and passion that you completely overlook the fact he's not a bit good looking? . . .

The picture has a clever little plot. Principal characters are—a lady who wants a divorce; the young man who wants to marry, but has never been formally introduced to her and doesn't know her name; a professional co-respondent; the prospective divorcée's flighty aunt, lawyer, and husband.

The big song and dance number features the "Continental," danced by Astaire, Ginger Rogers, and ensemble. A gorgeous, titillating affair—but a bit too long drawn out.

Miss Rogers is charming in the title rôle and makes an excellent tripping partner for Mr. Astaire. You'll remember how effective they were together in "Flying Down to Rio."

Eric Rhodes, as a waiter who delivers ridiculous monologs, is uniquely funny. He was in the stage production, as was Eric Blore, who depicts the debonair co-respondent amusingly.

As the aunt, Alice Brady has one of those fluttery, talky, dumbdora rôles that she protrays so well. Speaking of auntie, Boner Hunters:

Did you notice the place where she comes in and out of the hotel doors with and without a black evening coat? First she comes out WITH the coat, goes back in and comes back without the coat, and returns a third time WITH the wrap.

How did it happen? Well—Miss Brady has taken on about fifteen pounds, which the camera duly tattled about. Her second entrance was the "shot" taken first, and when she watched the "rushes" that's the one she saw. Those extra pounds sure did show up. She asked permission to wear the coat. It was granted—and the other two scenes were made. But, you see, in assembling the picture, the one scene without the coat was left in.

And that, my children, was how grandma's lace cap got caught in the airplane.

See you tomorrow!

ENLIGHTENED age note. The Rev. Clinton C. Cox, pastor of the Drexel Park Presbyterian church, who is called the "marrying parson of Drexel Park," sent out a questionnaire to all the married couples in the congregation. One of the questions was, "What factor has caused the most disturbance in your married life?" Four husbands answered "Fortune tellers."

ANOTHER questionnaire concerns the survey made by Mrs. Anne Rogers, psychologist at Sullivan High school. Among the questions she put to some 1,000 high school boys and girls was one by means of which she tried to estimate what was their greatest problem in regard to their families. One boy wrote:

"We have a dog, and everybody in the family loves it and pets it and plays with it, but when it comes time to take the dog for a walk, he's MY dog."

VERNON DUKALSKI—perhaps you know him as Vernon Duke—who wrote "April in Paris" and "I Like the Likes of You," told the story of his new ballet "Jardin Publique" last evening in the drawing room of a friend. It is a ballet being considered for one of the offerings of the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe this winter, with Massine dancing the main rôle at its world première here. As he told the story of the ballet the white walls of the room fell away; one saw the green reaches of a French public park and the humorous and tragic figures that enter it between dawn and dark. The composer played some of the music, as earlier he had played some of his popular pieces, and there was talk of choreography and settings. Mr. Dukalski's inspiration for the story came from "The Counterfeiters," by Andre Gide, he said.

* *

THE talented Russian who looks too young to have written the music for Diaghileff's first ballet, "Flora and Zephyr," arrived in town only Wednesday, but he was brought both to Richards Myers' cocktail party at the Tavern club that afternoon and to Carleton Smith's luncheon at the Arts club Thursday, for Giuseppe Bentonelli, a luncheon that in the interest and variety of its guests would have done credit to any seasoned hostess, let alone a shy and quiet bachelor. There were among the guests at least three composers, a singer or two, a concert pianist, a foreign correspondent, several authors, a magazine editor, and half a dozen of the loveliest ladies of the town.

* *

THEN there was the young priest who, when asked by a member of the parish where the choir obtained their beautiful vestments, answered:

Service Club to Give Annual Revue Tonight

Friends and Relatives Will Applaud Cast.

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE Civic theater tonight will be filled with mothers and fathers, sisters and brothers, grandparents, uncles and aunts, friends and beaux of the girls who will take part in the annual Service club revue, entitled "Little Lady, What Next?" It will be a jolly, happy audience, not a critical one, for to every one in the theater there will be some one on the stage who is THE STAR of the show, even though Miss Thelma Jensen is billed as the leading lady.

The applause will be hearty, whether the performance is good or bad; but judging from all we've heard of this year's show, it will be a very creditable performance. There is quite a lot of talent among the younger set with some very nimble feet and several nice voices and the choruses will make up in youth and charm what they lack in experience.

All the debutantes who aren't away at college will take part and so will some of the older girls who have taken part in previous Service club revues and who have scored successes.

Miss Mary Cook, the lovely young Evanstonian who dances so well, will dance tonight and also sing.

Miss Marie Hisgen, who has won praise in at least one other Service club show and in the South Shore Follies, will dance also, and Miss Emily Goehst has the heaviest comedy part. . . .

When the curtain is rung down for the last time many of the younger members of the audience and all the cast will drive over to the Blackstone hotel, where the club is giving its annual cabaret ball in the crystal ballroom. The proceeds of the show will be distributed among the fifty charitable organizations to which the club contributes each year.

Tell Engagement of Revue Chorine.

Miss Helen Holmes, one of the dancing chorines of the Service club was receiving congratulations after the dress rehersal last night for more reasons than one. Her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Edward M. Holmes of Oak Park had just announced her engagement to Richard Lee Bradley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bradley also of Oak Park, and the dancing debutantes were anxious to wish their sister-actress happiness and good luck.

Pretty Miss Holmes, whose elder sister, Mrs. Eric C. Lambart has long been an outstanding member of the club, attended Miss Weaver's school at Andrebrook, N. Y., and the University of Chicago where she was a Quadrangler. Mr. Bradley is a graduate of the University of Chicago. No date has been set for the wedding.

Georgiana MacArthur Sets Wedding Date.

Miss Georgiana MacArthur, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred MacArthur, has chosen Saturday, Nov. 17, as the date for her marriage to Henry B. Gardner Jr. of Providence, R. I. The service will be read at 4:30 o'clock by the Rev. Herbert E. Prince of the Church of the Holy Spirit, Lake Forest, at the residence of the bride's parents in Libertyville.

Polly Sheldon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Sheldon of Winnetka, will be the flower girl and the bride's only attendant, and Walter Gardner of Washington will be his brother's best man. Only members of the two families will attend. The bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Gardner, will come from Providence.

Mrs. Hardwick Moseley will attend Miss Elisabeth Bunting and John Dern will act as best man for Cecil Crouse when they are married today at noon in the chapel of the Church of the Holy Spirit in Lake Forest.

The bride, who is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Bunting of Lake Bluff, will wear her going away suit, for the wedding is to be very small and informal, with just the families and a few intimate friends present. Among the guests will be the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Henry Van Asmus, and her aunt, Mrs. Mathilde Grant. Following the ceremony there will be a breakfast at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Bunting.

Reveal Marriage of Grace Nelson.

Interesting news revealed this morning is that of the marriage last April of Miss Grace Nelson, daughter of F. August Nelson, and John Conrad Weisert. The former Miss Nelson is a concert pianist and was a protégée of the late Arthur Bissell. It was through Mr. Bissell that Mr. Weisert made her acquaintance more than two years ago, after her splendid performance as soloist with Mr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra which established her as one of the caliber artists in the country.

With a bagpiper in the lead, more than 100 Lake Forest children will parade through the grounds of Mrs. Howard Van Doren Shaw's Lake Forest home this evening and then circle about a huge fire, where they will tell stories and sing songs for an hour or more. Mrs. Shaw's annual "bonfire" is one of the most anticipated

In Society Show Tonight

Miss Mary Cook, who has danced exquisitely in previous Service club revues, will dance again in this year's and she also will sing. The revue, "Little Lady, What Next?" will be given tonight in the Civic theater. Miss Cook, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond C. Cook of Evanston, also will take part in the Evanston Junior league Follies on Nov. 1, 2, and 3.

Warmth, Style Insure Coats a Grid Rating

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Of course anything and everything is good fashion for the purpose of keeping the shivering streamline warm at a football game, but there are some coats in town that will make you frightfully uneasy unless you own one of them. They have been designed just for the games, so it seems after one glance at the thick, nubby fabrics, the high, fluffy fur collars, and the high colors.

Even though you are perched a couple of miles from the 50 yard line, sort of balancing yourself on the rim of things, you'll be warm with such grand looking coats wrapped snugly around you.

The price tags are mercifully low enough to just nick any modest clothes allowance. The colors alone will keep you warm; for instance, there is one orange red and dark gray plaid topped with gray fur, another of soft yellow with pale gray, some vivid Kelly greens, and a checked number in two knockout shades of bright blue. Colors that can be seen and heard for miles, but what a joy to wear.

If you're a timid soul there are some particularly swanky small checks and some models that are made of soft, woolly material like camel's hair. These are seamed, collared, cuffed, and patched with deep pockets as well as a nice wide belt to cinch tightly around the waistline. These last mentioned coats are without fur, but the collar can be pulled up high over the ears and buttoned into place, and they lap double over the chest.

Artist Makes Navy a Brisk, Human Thing

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

Told in smashing colors, the story of the American navy is written for all to read in the brilliant group of paintings by Lieut. Arthur Beaumont, which yesterday had its first showing in the O'Brien galleries, North Michigan avenue. The exhibit gives the effect of an exploding rocket, scattering its vigorous streaks and beams here and there, caring little where each struck, and still, out of apparent chaos, invoking intelligible characters.

The ships and the sea, the sky and the clouds, the backgrounds of rock or hills or trees, possess personal properties and stand out as real figures, authentic, incontrovertible, while at the same time they are parts of the creative convulsion that begot them.

This impetuous approach to a serious subject is rather unusual. The navy has been a topic weighted with leaden prose year after year in our news columns. Now and then a sober, serious ship has been depicted as the spirit of the navy, usually in capitals. Lieut. Beaumont has reduced the navy to a human affair, a tremendous enterprise quivering with life. The romance of the navy, something we have been told went out with clipper ships, is still alive. In painting after painting of these modern, up-to-date boats, romance, and glamor are present in evident quantities. The navy is brisk, awake and powerful. It is manned by active, thoughtful men, whose severity is crossed by humor.

All this and more one reads in these water colors. They are a liberal education. From the standpoint of art, they are brilliant. From the standpoint of human interest, they are fascinating. Lieut. Beaumont shows us the airplane carriers in action. The "Hornets' Nest" is one of the finest of these, the big mother ship steaming ahead while, above, a swarm of planes like hornets sweep away from her, to return when their mission is finished. One of these carriers is painted running between the sides of the Panama canal, so narrow the canal and so broad the boat, there is danger of scraping.

"The Robot" is the U. S. S. Utah, now guided by wireless to afford a target for the modern warships. "Smoke Screens" shows us another angle of navy maneuvers, and "Heavy Weather," with its rolling black billows and blacker skies, shows us what the ships must be prepared for when storms smash suddenly upon the seas.

The exhibition will continue into November and is well worth seeing. Two paintings of the navy by Lieut. Beaumont will be reproduced tomorrow by THE TRIBUNE on the color page of the rotogravure section.

'Otello' Proves a Climax for Opera Series

Otello.....Arnold Lindi
Iago.....Mario Valle
Cassio.....Francesco Curci
Desdemona.....Bianca Saroya
Emilia.....Philine Falco
Lodovico.....Natale Cervi
Roderico.....Stefan Kozakevich
Montano.....Fausto Bozza

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Fortune Gallo, who manages and controls the San Carlo Opera company, would seem desirous of leaving Chicago in the wake of a climax. Therefore he ordained that last night the bill should be "Otello," one of Verdi's finest and least frequently presented works.

In his old age, as here and there earlier in his life, Verdi turned to Shakespeare as a source for a libretto. The reason that "Otello" is so seldom heard is that there are so few tenors able to sing the title rôle.

It requires a tenor with a sense of lofty tragedy and a voice that can at one time shout like a cheer leader at a football game and at another come down to the most rapturous sort of lyric melody. Such artists are the rarest on earth. Mr. Gallo should be congratulated on having the contractual services of Mr. Lindi.

For Mr. Lindi is a personage who should be due to revive some traditions. One feels that his only weakness now is a taste for making short gestures, from the elbow instead of from the shoulder. Vocally he is superb, one of the artists who register in the first rank. Admitting that the first act was a trifle tentative last night, a bit in the sense of feeling its way and without the familiarity of most of the San Carlo performances, the second act began to build up fine, moving, and impressive tragedy.

And when Mr. Lindi was joined by other superb artists, among them Mr. Valle as Iago, and certainly Miss Saroya as Desdemona, not to mention Miss Falco's first class Emilia, one need have asked no more.

Did I say that "Otello" is one of Verdi's less familiar operas? The house was as crowded as though the bill had been "Il Troyatore" or "Aida."

Maryla Karuowski, Janus Poplawski, and Michael C. Zacharias, leading artists in the cast of the Polish opera, "Halka," to be presented at the Civic Opera house tomorrow night, were entertained at luncheon at the Auditorium hotel yesterday. Mayor Kelly and Judge Jarecki were among the welcoming committee.

When the famous Gertrude Stein opera, "Four Saints in Three Acts," is presented at the Auditorium theater in the series beginning Nov. 7, it will be conducted by the composer of its music, Virgil Thomson.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Eight royal bridesmaids will follow Princess Marina down the aile in Westminster abbey when her marriage to the duke of Kent takes place on Nov. 29.

The names were announced tonight by the lord chamberlain's office as follows: Princess Juliana of the Netherlands, Princess Irene of Greece, Princess Katharina of Greece, Grand Duchess Kira of Russia, Princess Elizabeth of York, Princess Eugenie of Greece, Lady Iris Mountbatten and Lady Mary Cambridge.

Little Princess Elizabeth, 8 years old, daughter of the duke and duchess of York, will be acting as bridesmaid for the second time. She was bridesmaid to Lady May Cambridge at her wedding to Capt. Henry Abel Smith in 1931. Lady Iris Mountbatten is the 14 year old daughter of King George's cousin, the marquess of Carisbrooke, while Lady Mary Cambridge, who is 10, is a niece of Queen Mary.

BLAZING GUNS

By WILLIAM MacLEOD RAINE

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Landis marries Cole Sanborn, fearless young outlaw and suspected train robber, within an hour after meeting him. Their marriage is one in name only in order to fight against their common enemy, Chet Radbourne, powerful boss in the country and owner of Circle 3 T ranch. He has been trying to force Mary to marry him and has been stealing cattle from her Lazy B ranch. Mary is captured and taken to Circle 3 T ranch. Slim Calhoun, a good looking young outlaw in Radbourne's employ, has a run in with Jerry Haskell, Chet's foreman, and leaves Circle 3 T ranch and joins Cole. Cole forces Chet Radbourne to surrender Mary and puts her under the protection of the Peters family in Jonesboro. Radbourne captures Rusty Hunter, one of Cole's trusted men, and a young boy named Morse. After giving Art Simmons a note to take to Mary in case anything happens to him, Cole captures Radbourne and forces him to make his men surrender Rusty. Then Cole and his men and Radbourne, their prisoner, wait the return of Jerry Haskell. They defend the house against Haskell until he fires it, and forces them to make a rush for the horse corral. Gray Shirt, as they call the hired killer, Faust, gets Simmons to give Cole's note to Mary. Mary sends Sheriff Magruder to the rescue. In her anxiety for her husband's safety she rides after them alone. Besieged in the horse corral, Cole offers to settle the matter by a duel between Haskell and himself. Haskell is forced by his men to agree, but instead he leaps on his horse and flees. Haskell meets Mary and, to avenge himself against Cole, tries to make her go with him. She escapes but not before he whips her with his quirt. Slim Calhoun and Faust ride out to punish Haskell and Mary tries to keep the story from Cole, but a busybody tells him and Cole, true to the frontier code, rides out to punish Haskell.

INSTALMENT XLVIII.

TRAPPED!

Cole had traveled very steadily all day. He wanted to get to Rabbit Ear Pass before Haskell in order to lie in wait for him. A fight in the open was barred. That would mean he had to kill or be killed, and he had promised Mary to avoid so drastic an issue. He had to trap the man and get the drop on him.

Probably Haskell would not hurry. He could not know that the officers had evidence enough to convict him of the train robbery. For Magruder had moved with extraordinary secrecy. Nobody knew in what direction he had gone after the desert swallowed him. He could afford to take his time. So he would argue.

Cole rode into the pass, but drew up at a sandy draw near the entrance to examine the ground for footprints. What he saw surprised him. This was a country of few travelers. The hot and dusty desert deflected trafic, which went by way of Jonesboro and skirted the hills. Only those in a hurry, or those who had reasons for not wanting to be seen, took the short cut through Rabbit Ear. Yet two horses had passed here within an hour or two. The crumbling dirt that had fallen into the tracks was still soft and loose.

Did that mean Haskell had picked up a companion and was still in front of him? In that case, who was the rider to the right whose dust he had seen?

"So it's you, Mr. Haskell," he drawled.

Cole decided to wait for the solitary traveler. He would still have time, by hard going, to reach the railroad as soon as Haskell, if it turned out that the ex-foreman of the Circle 3 T was one of the two ahead of him. Sanborn led his horse up a draw and tethered it among the rocks at the head of the little gulch. Rifle in hand, he walked back and selected a spot from which he could cover the trail.

He waited, with the patience that comes to one who has spent years in the untenanted outdoors. A half an hour passed, three-quarters. Cole began to think his calculations had gone wrong. It was possible the traveler had seen the footprints and was doing a little thinking on his own account. If so, and if the man was Haskell, how would he meet the situation?

Cole found out, sooner than he desired. A raucous voice called an order to him.

"Stick yore hands up!"

Cole's heart went down like a thermometer plunged into icy water. Instead of trapping his man he had been trapped.

He put his hands up and turned, a cheerful smile on his face. "So it's you, Mr. Haskell," he drawled. "We've been looking for you and you've decided to save us trouble. Good enough."

"Don't fool yourself," Haskell jeered. "I'm going to bump you off—now. You came here asking for what you're going to get. You never saw the day I couldn't beat you from the chunk. Try to run me down, would you? I'll show you."

Cole kept his impudent grin working. "Haven't you forgotten one little thing, Mr. Haskell? There are three of us. If and when you shoot, my friends will close in on you. That wouldn't be so good—for you."

"I don't believe it. You're playing a lone hand. Who are yore friends?"

Haskell spoke boldly, but he felt a chill premonition of disaster. Three sets of horses' hoofs had entered the pass. Where were the other riders? Somewhere among these rocks, likely.

Sanborn's mind worked in flashes. He spoke without hesitation, without haste, choosing the names of men known to be game and with reputations for hard riding and fighting.

"Slim Calhoun and Faust," he said, a touch of derision in his cool voice. "It won't do, Haskell. Better put down that gun before you commit suicide. I'll make you a proposition that will give you a run for your money. You've always claimed you are the best man in Boone county with your dukes. I'm going to find that out, now."

"What you mean?" Haskell demanded suspiciously.

"We'll settle this if you have enough sand in your craw in a fist and skull fight. You win, and the road is open to the railroad. Neither I nor my friends will molest you. If I win, you go back with me to Jonesboro."

"Whyfor would I go back to Jonesboro?"

"To answer a few questions Magruder wants to ask you about the K. & J. robbery," Cole said quietly.

"I ain't scared to answer any questions he asks me, and I ain't scared to put up my dukes with you. I could whip you the best day you ever saw with one hand tied behind me," blustered Haskell.

"That's what I'm going to find out, as I said before. You can use a quirt on a woman, you cowardly dog. Let us see how you stack up when you face a man."

"Ask yore friend Slim about that," the ex-foreman boasted. "And how do I know you'd stick to yore word and let me go after I've whipped you?"

"You know it because I'm not a liar like you," Cole told him curtly. "Make up your mind in a hurry. What's it to be? Do you want a chance for your life? Or don't you?"

Jerry ripped out a savage oath. "You've got a licking coming to you, fellow," he cried, and put down his revolver.

Cole unbuckled his belt, dropped it, and stepped forward. In him was a cold vindictive joy. Haskell had delivered himself into his hands. He had promised Mary not to kill the man, but he had said nothing about beating him as long as he could stand and take it.

Haskell shuffled forward awkwardly. He was strong as a bear, and his great power had always brought him victory in a hand to hand rough and tumble. His big fist swept round in a wide swing. Cole beat him to the punch with a hard right to the chin. An uptilted elbow deflected the swing. Before Cole stepped back he had landed two heavy body punches.

The bigger man grunted and rushed, head down and arms flailing. An uppercut snapped back the head and a straight left reached an eye. Once more Sanborn was out of reach, still untouched except for blows his arms and shoulders had smothered. Cole's muscles were long and rippling, like those of a panther. He moved in and out lightly, easily, and his arms lashed out with precision and perfect timing.

The foreman was already panting heavily. Both eyes were swollen and his cheeks were puffed. What worried him was that he could not land his blows effectively. He did not know he was telegraphing them in time for his foe to sidestep, duck, or drive home counter punches a fraction of a second before his own were due to arrive. Jerry was never a fast thinker, but it was clear to him now that he was beaten unless he could close with this fellow and throw him down so that his skill would be wasted.

He rushed again and caught a ringing clout on the side of the head. His reaching arms did not close on the elusive enemy. He stopped to gather breath, his lungs gasping. The noise of hammers and of buzzling saws were singing in his dizzy brain. Sanborn would not let him rest, but swarmed all over him.

Haskell fought back with all he had. A red bruise showed on Cole's cheekbone. His lip was cut. But Jerry did not deceive himself. He knew he was staggering, that legs and arms were heavy with weariness. Nothing could save him if he was not able to throw Sanborn down and beat his head against the ground till he was unconscious. The big man went forward drunkenly, trying to get a grip on his antagonist.

Cole knew his time had come. Out of the corner of an eye he saw a boulder behind him and avoided it. Jerry stumbled into the outcropping rock, and at the same instant Cole's right lashed to the chin.

events of the year in the lives of these Lake Forest children.

Without a doubt the inspiration for the affair is that famous cartoon, "Injun Summer," of Mrs. Shaw's son-in-law, John T. McCutcheon, for it is in that very spirit that the party is held. The McCutcheons' three sons and the Clay Judsons' children will be Mrs. Shaw's official hosts and hostesses this evening.

Society Attends Premiere of Film.

It isn't often that a moving picture premiere achieves the social importance of a grand opera opening, but that is what Grace Moore's "One Night of Love" did last night. The mezzanine of the Chicago theater, which had been reserved for the invited guests, was filled with socialites for the presentation, and everywhere one heard enthusiastic comment about the picture.

Dozens of dinner parties had been given before the movie party, some of the hosts and hostesses being Daggett Harvey, who entertained at Harvey's restaurant for Miss Gwendolyn Bowen, debutante daughter of the Joseph T. Bowens; the Walter S. Brewsters, the Arthur Cables, the John Alden Carpenters, Prince Cantacuzene, the Charles H. Chadwicks, Mrs. Augustus Eddy, the Huntington B. Henrys, the Stewart Harveys, Miss Alice Gerstenberg, the Charles B. Goodspeeds, the Graham Aldises, Mrs. Jacob Baur, and Miss Janet Fairbank.

John Williamses Parents of Daughter.

There isn't a prouder grandfather in these parts than Harlow D. Higinbotham, who is the master of Harlowarden down at Joliet, for his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Skelton Williams Jr., are still rejoicing over the addition of a little daughter to their family. The baby was born the day after Labor day, Sept. 4, down in Richmond, Va. where the Williamses live. She has been named Anne Marsden.

On the maternal side the young lady's ancestry goes back to the president of the Columbian Exposition, Harlow N. Higinbotham. Her paternal grandmother is Mrs. John Williams of Richmond and her paternal grandfather, the late Mr. Williams, who was controler of currency and assistant secretary of the treasury under President Wilson.

Late yesterday afternoon Miss Kate Buckingham arrived home after a long summer at Bald Head in Lenox, Mass. Miss Buckingham is especially interested, of course, in the operatic debut of her protégé, Giuseppe Bentonelli, this season. She will be here through the beginning of January and then will go to Arizona for the remainder of the winter.

Geographic Society Luncheon Today.

The Geographic Society of Chicago will hold a post-vacation luncheon today in the grand ballroom of the Palmer house. This is an annual get-together of members to talk over their summer travels. Mrs. Laura C. Boulton, who recently has returned from West Africa, where she went as a member of the Straus expedition of the Field museum, will tell of her experience in Angola.

Mrs. Boulton has new records of West African music and she is a delightful speaker, so it is certain to be an interesting meeting.

At 8:30 o'clock this evening in the ballroom of the Powhatan at 4950 Chicago Beach drive, where Mr. and Mrs. Alfred B. Schmidt make their home, Miss Betty Ann Schmidt will become the bride of Wilfred H. Heitman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry O. Heitman. The service will be read by the Rev. Russell Boynton of the Bryn Mawr Community church in the presence of 250 friends of the two families. A reception will follow the ceremony.

Miss Evelyn Jahncke, who has been the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon D. Beatty at their home, Hilane, on Vollmer road in Flossmoor, has left to return to her home in New Orleans. She is a former queen of the New Orleans Mardi Gras. Mr. and Mrs. Beatty have leased the house of Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Saxe in Flossmoor while the Saxes are on a cruise to Florida and the West Indies.

Dr. and Mrs. Vernon Herbst, who have just returned from five months in South America, announce the engagement of their daughter, Elinor Rosenwald, to Dr. Joseph M. Harris of Los Angeles. No date for the marriage is set. Mrs. Herbst's son, Richard M. Rosenwald, was married to Miss Milly Metzenberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Metzenberg, last Wednesday at a quiet family wedding at which Dr. Horace Bridges officiated.

Mrs. Brown Heads Wellesley Alumnae.

A busy year awaits Mrs. Ralph C. Brown, who is spending this week-end on the Wellesley college campus at Wellesley, Mass., for the purpose of assuming her duties as the new president of the Wellesley College Alumnæ association. Mrs. Brown, with her group of fellow officers from Chicago, is also taking part in the ceremonies incident to Miss Ellen Fitz Pendleton's 23d anniversary as president of Wellesley.

The Wellesley Alumnæ association functions under a plan whereby it elects its national officers each year from one district. The present Chicago officers succeed the Boston group.

The other Chicago officers include Mrs. Bruce MacLeish, first vice president; Mrs. William Sherman Hay, second vice president; Mrs. W. Hamilton Walter, treasurer, and Mrs. Alfred H. Taylor, secretary.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward John Fleming (the former Betty Brown) and Mr. Fleming's sister and her husband, the junior Arthur Seibolds, are entertaining friends this evening at the Seibold home in Glencoe. Invitations have been issued for a buffet supper at 7:30.

The box circle in the old Auditorium will be filled this afternoon with the friends of Mrs. Archibald Freer, for a part of the program of the San Carlo Opera company is to be the presentation of Mrs. Freer's "Ballet Vasilissa." This will be the "première" of the ballet which Fortune Gallo, director of the San Carlo company, has acclaimed as outstanding. The first part of the opera program will be the presentation of the comedy opera "Martha."

Perfectly Practical Lines

WOMAN'S AND MISS' DRESS.

Here is a dress just perfect for office or town wear. Smart trimming is achieved by the buttons from neck to hem. This dress cuts in one from shoulder to hem, with no waistline joining. A soft angora finished woolen in a green and brown mixture, with brown buttons, made the original. In heavy canton crêpe, or in velveteen, it's extremely smart.

The pattern, No. 3425, comes in sizes 14, 16, and 18 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure.

BY MARY MEADE.

The question, "What shall I serve with the cake?" seems to have taken a right-about-face. Or else most of the inquiring readers have solved that riddle to their satisfaction.

For the writers-in now are pursuing a little something or other to serve with a salad—something that will take the conversation away from Mrs. B's last trick and Mrs. M's business double.

These hame crisps should set the girls to singing for their supper. Pass them with a banana split salad or some one other of the fruited variety.

Ham Crisps.

2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking powder
6 tablespoons water
¾ cup shortening
1 egg
¼ cup deviled ham.

Sift together the flour, salt, and baking powder. Blend the shortening with the dry ingredients. Beat the egg and add the deviled ham and water to it. Blend this mixture with the flour and shortening combination, a little at a time. Roll into a thin sheet and cut in triangles. Cut a gash in the center of each triangle and pull one corner of the triangle through the slit. Drop into deep fat heated to 370 degrees F. and fry until a delicate brown. Drain on paper.

Then there's a cheese stick to be plied alongside of vegetable salads. The proper time for their making is when you misjudged appetites and whipped too many mashed potatoes.

Potato-Cheese Sticks.

1 cup mashed potatoes
¼ cup flour
1 tablespoon melted butter
½ cup grated cheese
¼ teaspoon salt

Blend the ingredients thoroughly. Roll out to ½ inch thickness and cut into thin strips. Brush with a little milk and bake on a greased cookie sheet for 10 minutes in a hot oven [475 degrees F.].

The height of tastiness is reached when a little anchovy goes a long way on a crisp cracker, and the result accompanies a fresh vegetable salad.

Anchovy Crackers.

3 tablespoons anchovy paste
¾ cup mayonnaise
2 egg whites.

Combine the anchovy paste and mayonnaise. Fold in the egg whites, which have been beaten until stiff. Spread on crackers and bake in a hot oven until brown and puffed.

These cheese puffs are made in somewhat the same fashion, but without the cracker foundation.

Cheese Puffs.

2 tablespoons butter, melted
3 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons grated American cheese
¼ teaspoon salt
3 egg whites.

Blend the flour with the melted butter and add the cheese, salt, and cayenne. Beat the egg whites until stiff and fold them into the cheese mixture. Drop on a buttered baking sheet in teaspoonsful and bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] until golden brown.

De Danans Dance.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Mrs. Roosevelt went to Philadelphia today, where tonight she attended the first performance of opera for this season. Mrs. Roosevelt will go to Williamsburg, Va., from Philadelphia to join the President and return with him on a trip up Chesapeake bay and the Potomac river on board the Sequoia.

Mrs. Dall, daughter of the President, who is again at the White House, is busy house hunting, as she intends not to spend the winter again at the White House. She has entered both her children in schools and will make Washington her home.

The German ambassador, Dr. Hans Luther, gave tonight the traditional "Polterabend," given by the German people the night before the wedding of their children. This was for the ambassador's daughter, Gertraud, who will become the bride of Gerrit von Haeften, third secretary of the embassy, tomorrow in Concordia Lutheran church, followed by a reception and supper in the embassy.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

THESE SHORT SUITED SLAMS.

Yesterday I gave you an actual tournament hand which illustrated in striking manner the efficacy of bidding a four-card suit when developing a slam, the bidding having reached three no trumps without any mention of a suit. In this hand the responder held a five-card suit headed by ace-queen, but it was never mentioned. Consequently this suit was at some tables led at the first trick, thereby converting the play of the slam into a simple process whereas without that lead it needed careful play, though undefeatable if played properly. You will remember that the slam was bid in hearts, a four-card suit held by the opening no trump bidder and never mentioned by him until after three no trumps had been bid. I feel that this hand, considered in conjunction with my earlier articles and examples of similar suit bids made by the responding hand in accepting a no trump slam try, will suffice to illustrate this phase of bidding. I will conclude with a brief summary of the essential points.

When you bid a no trump as dealer or in second position, and your partner's response is three no trumps, he is making a slam try. However, you must assume that he still needs some further information from you. Cooperate with him as follows:

1. With a minimum hand of not more than two aces and not more than three and a half primary tricks, pass. Do so even with a bidable four-card suit; your decision at this point is based on primary values.

2. With either three aces in a three and a half primary trick hand, or with a four primary trick hand, though possessing less than three aces, accept the slam by bidding four no trumps if you cannot bid a suit, or by bidding four in a suit if you have a four-card suit headed by two of the top three honors. That is what I mean by "bidable" in this particular situation.

3. With greater reserve value in excess of your requirements for bidding a no trump, take the strain off your partner when justified in doing so. Sometimes you will have enough secondary values in your hand to make it clear that your partner's slam try marks him with all that is needed for six no trumps. In that event, bid it yourself immediately. Your partner has announced possession of [a] an ace; [b] a second ace or a king-queen holding; [c] a third primary trick. You yourself have at least three and a half primary tricks for your opening bid, assuming that you now accept the slam try. The slam almost surely depends on additional intermediates. If you have them, incorporate them in your acceptance; if you lack them but can nevertheless accept the slam try, leave it to your partner to go on to the slam if he supplies the fillers which you have denied.

4. If responder has made the three no trump slam try with no more than the minimum justification for it, and his partner bids four in a suit, responder must not pass, even with four to a top honor in that suit. He must either raise the suit, or, lacking the trump support, bid four no trumps. Opener may still have some reserve values, and the decision whether to slam or sign off should at this point be handed back to the opening bidder, assuming that the responder has shot his bolt.

Grand Slams.

Grand slams will result from this bidding only if opener has a very strong hand, so that he can immediately know that there is no ace against the hand and that there will be at worst a simple finesse for seven, with a chance of not needing that finesse if things go normally in other respects.

For instance, if you have bid a no trump on

Sp. A J x	Di. A J x x
Hi. K Q x	Cl. A K x

and your partner bids three, now you know he has the missing ace and also K-Q of spades and diamonds, but no conceivable rebid values that he can know to be such. The gamble therefore is whether you can throw off your losing club. If his four-card suit is either of the majors, you will get your discard if that suit breaks. If it is diamonds or clubs, you will presumably need a finesse in clubs, and must hope that your partner has the queen of clubs or else J 10, cards which he could not include in his bidding if you bid six hoping he could go to seven. The grand slam would thus be a pretty fair chance. With A K J in clubs the finesse is already provided and the grand slam must be bid. With the hand as printed above decide whether to bid six or seven no trumps according to your position in the rubber or tournament or according to whether your close decisions had been right or wrong on that particular day—whether boldness or caution had seemed to prevail. Call it a hunch decision with slightly better than even chances in your favor, if you prefer.

Personality Is Key to Choice of Any Perfume

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

There are discriminating perfume users, highly discriminating perfume users, women with little discrimination, and women with none at all. The first two classes are those we should try to ape. The fastidious ones, who know their lovely bottled stuff, apply it first directly upon the skin. You can dab it on eyebrows and hair later, if you feel you must, which you probably won't, if you're a discriminating user. Put it on the ears, on the chest, on the insides of the wrists and on the tips of the fingers, all spots where perfume is in direct contact with skin. Very lightly, of course, since it is a scent, not a smell, which you want to leave in fragrant trail.

The classification of types to perfumes and vice versa is no longer a so called pastime of authorities. Remember, in the old days, when the blondes were supposed to use only the gee-gaw flower scents, the brunettes the heavy ones, the redheads something in between? Well, now, you can choose a scent as you choose your frocks—for appeal and nothing else.

Naturally, you keep in character, as you do with your frocks and colors. There are so many, many odors, complicated mixtures and delicious, that one simply could not designate preferred wearers by a single flower tone. What is wanted more is discrimination in use of perfume. And I know no better way of saying it than repeating that it is a scent that should cling to your charming person, never a smell. The single theme in perfumes simplifies the "scented rôle." Perfume, powder, bath salts, toilet water, soap, sachet, all in the same key.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

New York, Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte have returned from the Virginia Hot Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. George Montgomery and Mrs. Frank W. Eaton will give a tea-dance on Nov. 29 for their debutante daughters, Miss Susan W. Sicard and Miss Frances Anne Eaton, in the ballroom of Sherry's.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Vose White of Rumson have joined the latter's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Porter Hoaglund, at the Ambassador hotel.

An Indifferent Mother Will Be an Unloved One

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

"I have never had much love for my mother."

That is a shocking statement, isn't it? Yet I have heard it said or seen it written by grown and married women a number of times in the last few months.

"I never had much love for my mother."

I have heard it said—but those mothers about whom it was said have not. Perhaps they are so lacking in warmth as human beings and in real maternal feeling that, even if they heard it now, they would not be able to sense wherein they had failed.

Different women who make it attribute their lack of filial love to different causes. In several cases I knew of the mother was cold toward her child, never showing in any way that she loved her. In one or two other situations the mother was constantly punishing her daughter, while the father, who in these instances is remembered with deep affection, would take the little girl on his knee and accomplish by gentle reasoning all that the mother, with her severity, had failed to do.

In another case the woman cannot remember a time when her mother praised her.

The woman who makes herself a fine and love-worthy mother when her children are young does so because giving and cherishing are her desire. But though she is not thinking of gain for herself, she is building up treasure for herself in that future when her children shall be men and women.

Lemon brings out the Flavor
SALAD dressings should bring out the flavors of the fruits, vegetables, meats or fish and blend them. Lemon does this as nothing else can. So when you make French (or other dressings), use strained fresh lemon juice—the same amount as of any tart ingredient.

INDIANA PLAYS CHICAGO; BADGERS AT PURDUE

MAROONS TAKE LOOK AT FIVE MAN OFFENSE

Radio broadcasts—KYW, WIND, WLS, WENR.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

University of Chicago football stalwarts, or upstarts if you still refuse to take them seriously, will seek their second conference victory this afternoon against Indiana university's five-man back field offense devised by Bo McMillin, once of Centre college's Praying Colonels, now in his freshman year as head coach in the Big Ten.

Advance sale of tickets indicates an attendance of 15,000, perhaps more under the stimulus of pleasant weather and revived Chicago prestige, to witness activities beginning at 2 o'clock.

Maroons are favorites over the Hoosiers, a new experience. The coaching staff and rooters, however, anticipate no such runaway as occurred a week ago. Indiana, they say, is likely to be underestimated because of its opening 33 to 0 defeat by Ohio State. Its recovery to a 6-6 tie with Temple, coached by Pop Warner, is the impression which lingers on the Midway.

Precedent Favors Maroons.

Previous results favor the Maroons. Of 22 former games, 19 victories have been bagged by Chicago, two by Indiana, and one game resulted in a tie. It is fair to the Hoosiers to mention, however, that one of those victories was the 32-6 trouncing of 1931, followed by a narrow 13-7 triumph for Chicago in 1932 and a 7-7 tie last year.

Despite Maroon humiliation of the Wolverines a week ago by its widest margin of victory since athletic relations started back in 1892, there is no indication on the Midway of megalocephalia, or other sesquipedalian synonym, for plain old-fashioned "swell head."

Maroon Squad Small.

So instead of finding a group of over-confident young fellows, visit to the secret practice field for the final signal drills yesterday disclosed a group of earnest, enthusiastic boys. They have, as yet, no title illusions. They are content to take each game as it comes along.

Chicago's varsity squad numbers 47. Of these, perhaps 22 would be called football players at rival institutions where there is greater material. The others would be classed as "just out for the team." Therefore danger of injuries and not enough replacements are Chicago's problems in a difficult schedule undertaken admittedly to stimulate an anæmic athletic treasury.

Only Three Seniors.

The squad is led by Capt. Ellmore Patterson, "Father Ellmore," he is nicknamed because of his serious paternal mien. Coach Shaughnessy terms him the ideal captain in temperament and personality, with 100 per cent effort of his own to stimulate others to their best. Father Ellmore is a son of E. C. Patterson of Western Springs. Pat [the father], as he still is known to us football writers of 20 years ago, used to pick all-western and all-conference selections for Colliers when he was advertising executive of that publication.

Capt. Patterson is one of three seniors. The others are Baker at right end and Tommy Flinn, the dimunitive quarter back. Then there's Jay Berwanger, The Dutchman to his mates, who was named last fall as the most valuable player on the squad and a candidate for THE TRIBUNE Silver football. Berwanger is a triple threat man. Bartlett, the sophomore sensation of last Saturday's game, is one of four southern California boys among the first 22 men. Others are B. Peterson at left end. Bush at right tackle, and Wells at right half. Nyquist, a junior, is the reliable blocking full back.

Beware That Big, Bad Jinx, Last Warning to Notre Dame

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 19. — The Notre Dame football players went to bed tonight thinking of nothing except the words of warning given them by their coach, Elmer Layden, earlier in the day when they were sent through their final rehersal for tomorrow's game against the Scots from Carnegie Tech.

"No matter how good we might think we are or how weak we might think they are, Carnegie is our jinx opponent and the only way to beat 'em is to get in there and play football," was Layden's advice to his charges.

Layden also cautioned them about the spirit of contentment they have shown since they whipped Purdue last week-end, and the answer to this was a broad collective grin that indicated an intention of scoring at least a couple of touchdowns against the visitors.

Tired Feeling Disappears.

The fighting Irish lineup will be the same that prevailed at the kickoff in the struggle with Purdue. The lone possible alteration will be at center, where Fred Solari may operate in place of Jack Robinson. Layden had threatened to make a few changes to get rid of the boys he suspected had become infected with that tired feeling. The fact that he is not making the alterations indicates he is fairly well satisfied, but not for publication, that the tired ones have gained their second wind.

Worry Over Extra Points.

Layden's ace in the hole is the second of the four or five elevens at his command. A good portion of the second array of talent was in action against Purdue last Saturday, when 18 points were registered. A dozen of these were officially scored by George Melinkovich, right half back, but he had notable assistance in his efforts from some of the second stringers. Incidentally, Melinkovich is tops as Notre Dame's point getter thus far this season. Besides two touchdowns against Purdue he crossed the goal once in the futile battle with Texas.

One other item as worrisome to Notre Dame as the Carnegie jinx which has made itself evident in three games is the matter of kicking for the extra point after touchdown. The Irish haven't picked up a point in that fashion during the season. Both Wayne Millner, an end, and Wallace Fromhart, a quarter back, stand charged with missing two apiece. One of the misses was important. It was the difference between a tie and defeat in the Texas "breather" game. Millner will be given another shot at it tomorrow, provided there is a touchdown or two to make the attempt possible.

There still is much confusion locally as to why Howard Harpster, the Carnegie coach, made sweeping changes in his lineup on the eve of what to the Scots is a big game. The Scots, who were loitering down at Elkhart, Ind., today sent over word that the shifts were made because the coach wasn't satisfied with what he saw while his lads were being bruised last week by Michigan State.

Notre Dame inclines to a belief that Harpster made the alterations because he discovered he previously had underestimated the skill of some of his youths.

W-G-N to Report Notre Dame and Minnesota Games

W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE radio station, will broadcast the Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech football game direct from the Notre Dame stadium starting at 1:45 o'clock this afternoon. Before and as frequently as conditions will permit during the Notre Dame game, reports from the Minnesota-Pittsburgh contest at Pittsburgh also will be broadcast.

TROJANS, BEARS SEEK TO REGAIN WINNING STRIDE

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Two once mighty powers in Pacific coast football, Southern California's Trojans and California's Bears, arrive at the crossroads of disappointing seasons tomorrow in home games on whose outcome may ride new found hopes, or dreams of conquest completely shattered.

Defeated by Pittsburgh last week after an earlier whipping by Washington State, the Trojans return home to face a fairly confident Oregon State eleven, twice beaten itself.

California's Bears will meet the University of California at Los Angeles in the first conference game for the Bears. U. C. L. A. lost to Oregon and won from Montana in conference clashes.

A third conference game will pit Oregon, defeated by Washington last week, against Idaho, beaten 13 to 0, by Washington earlier in the season.

Joe Cronin and Bride Arrive at San Diego

San Diego, Cal., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Joe Cronin, manager of the Washington American league baseball team, and his bride arrived today from New York on the Panama Pacific liner Virginia. They are en route to San Francisco.

Mike Gonzales Signs with Cardinals for 1935

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Mike Gonzales, who will soon leave the United States to direct a baseball team in Cuba, today signed a contract to serve as coach of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals again in 1935.

UNBEATEN PITT AND MINNESOTA MATCH POWER

60,000 to See Leading Teams Clash Today.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 19.—On the crest of the soaring hills which guard the headwaters of the winding river trail to the Mississippi valley stands America's most costly football amphitheater, a mighty Coliseum blasted from primeval rock. The supporting concrete buttress for this plateau shelf drops perpendicularly in dizzying space to narrow streets, sole avenues of approach. Across the gridiron from the towering battlement, the peak of the hill rears its bald head to peer into the bowl gouged into its side.

On this plain, historic football battles have been fought, battles that rank as important in the annals of sport as the struggle which changed French Fort Duquesne to English Fort Pitt and determined the allegiance of a vast country.

That Notre Dame Game.

It was here that thousands saw Knute Rockne's last Notre Dame team, perhaps his greatest, ride in meteoric brilliance over the University of Pittsburgh, whipping another unbeaten eleven in a march to a national championship. It was here that afternoon Notre Dame reached an offensive peak which stunned the doughty Panthers and made five touchdowns in twice that number of thrusts at Pitt's defenses.

On this plain a week ago a new Pittsburgh eleven turned back the invaders from Southern California and in that triumph indicated it must be considered in the current campaign for national honors.

60,000 Expected to Attend.

And tomorrow afternoon, on this same sun browned gridiron, these conquerors of the men of Troy will meet another foe, the University of Minnesota, representative of the vast

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 19.—Tomorrow may be just another October Saturday to many citizens, but to the football teams of the University of Michigan and Georgia Tech, both of which have been beaten in two successive games, it occupies a fateful place on the calendar.

Their intersection contest at Michigan stadium offers to each an opportunity to salve the wounds with which they have been stricken down these last two Saturdays, and each is willing to make the most of the chance to experience the thrill of victory.

The Georgia Tech squad of three full teams arrived this morning in care of Coach Bill Alexander, and after making camp at Ypsilanti, where it will spend the night, it came over to the stadium for a brief workout. Mr. Alexander's boys, after taking their opener from Clemson by a 12 to 7 score, absorbed two resounding whacks on the chin, a 27 to 12 wallop from Vanderbilt and a 20 to 0 jolt from Duke. They opine it is high time they do something about the matter and admit that Michigan will serve nicely for the doing.

Michigan Wants a Score.

The Wolverines, who are in the throes of one of their rare off years, would be greatly pleased with a touchdown, let alone a victory. They have just picked themselves up from two terrible lickings, one by Michigan State, 16 to 0, and the other by Chi-

Americans Beat English Bridge Team in 300 Hands

LONDON, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The American bridge team, led by Ely Culbertson, today retained the Schwab trophy by defeating its English challengers in 300 hands.

Suspended on Two Trainers Dope Charges

Two race horse trainers, Harry Roseacher of Chicago and D. H. Carroll of Louisville, were suspended by the Illinois Racing commission yesterday after saliva tests had indicated that horses they sent to the post had been stimulated with dope.

Roseacher saddled Wilco at Lincoln Fields on Oct. 5 and the horse won. Carroll was the trainer of The Choctaw when the horse won a race at the Fairmount track near St. Louis on Sept. 20.

"Examination of the saliva specimens taken from the horses revealed that Wilco had been stimulated with morphine and The Choctaw with caffeine," the commission announced.

Both trainers were notified to file a written answer to the charges made by the commission and to show cause if any why they should not be ruled off for life for violating the anti-doping rules of the Illinois turf governing body.

Two saliva tests have been made each day throughout the Chicago season, which opened on May 1. Only three of the examinations have showed evidence of the use of "dope" on horses. The first case developed at Aurora last May, where a test showed that the horse Copain, trained by Harry Woods, had been stimulated. Woods was suspended indefinitly, but was restored to good standing a few weeks ago.

Uptown Arena Fined $500; Ignores Krone Injunction

For allegedly violating an injunction last April the Uptown Amusement corporation was fined $500 on a contempt charge by Judge William Lindsay in the Superior court yesterday. The injunction had been obtained by Doc Krone, wrestling promoter, to restrain the corporation, sublessors of the Arcadia Gardens, from interfering with Krone's promotion of a wrestling match in the Gardens. Despite the court order, Krone informed the court, the defendants prevented him from holding a wrestling show on April 12.

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 19.—Purdue, twice defeated in pre-Big Ten competition this season, but rarin' to get going in its own league, will meet Wisconsin, twice victorious in non-conference battles, tomorrow in the 19th football game between the two institutions. It will be the first conference game of the year for both teams.

The affair will be the Purdue homecoming, and according to indications today it will be favored by one of those typical Hoosier October days, the like of which is to be found in very few of these United States. Depite the reunion and autumn lure, the gathering may be a little short of the capacity of Ross-Ade stadium. Boilermaker defeats at the hands of Rice and Notre Dame apparently have cooled some of the customers who buy tickets in advance.

Purvis Is Out.

However, scouts sent out by the lads in the counting room bring tidings that a big gate sale is in prospect. Twenty thousand customers may be on hand at game time, it is said.

Wisconsin, on the basis of two victories, 3 to 0 over Marquette and 28 to 7 over South Dakota State, will enter the game a slight favorite over the Boilermakers, who licked Wisconsin 14 to 0 last year. Betting was at a standstill today because the Badgers and some 500 supporters were to be billeted in Chicago tonight. They are not due here until 11:35 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Purdue will start without Duane Purvis, still suffering from an injury to his right ankle, an injury, by the way, on which most Purdue partisans hang the blame for the Rice and Notre Dame embarrassments. Purvis last year ranked with the great half backs of the nation and the Purdue scheming naturally had been built largely around his special talents as a passer, kicker, and runner. Coach Noble Kizer, however, now has had time to revamp his plans and while Purvis' absence will be a handicap, of course, plays have been envolved with the knowledge that the great senior star will be in the game only a few minutes, if at all.

It's Up to Carter.

Jim Carter, only slightly in the shadow of Purvis' fame and recently an invalid of considerable misery himself, is back in good physical shape and the old gold and black backers are placing their hopes for victory somewhat on their belief that Carter will enjoy a complete return to form.

Injuries to Ted Fehring, Purdue's veteran right tackle, have given Coach Kizer deep concern and because of Fehrig's incapacity and other casualties at least four sophomores will be in the Boilermaker starting lineup. With Fehring out of the lineup, Capt. Carl Heldt has been shifted to right tackle, and his understudy, Forest Burmeister, a sophomore, has been moved up to the first string left tackle berth.

The sophomore contingent is expected to be completed by John Drake, full back who stepped into the limelight with his line plunging and defensive work against Rice and Notre Dame.

Purdue's ball carrying hopes against a reputedly good Badger line will rest upon the same backs that managed a last quarter touchdown against Notre Dame. Carter will provide the steadying influence in a youngster quartet, with Leon Dailey, who is scheduled to handle the kicking duties, at half back, Drake doing the full backing, and Gift calling signals.

Pepper Martin to Hunt Big Game in Mexico

Duquesne Runs Over Haskell Institute, 67 to 0

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Charging along in the same manner that marked their recent 99 to 0 conquest of Ashland, Duquesne's Night Riders smothered Haskell institute tonight, 67 to 0.

RICKEY ROO CAN RUN; PROVES IT IN 2D VICTORY

Skims Around Track to Win by 3 Lengths.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Rickey Roo, the 2 year old that was always quitting on Chicago's big tracks this season, has found his happy hunting grounds at Sportsman's Park.

No longer does he quit. He dashes to the front, skims around the hairpin curves as if they were made to order for him and wins by a wide margin.

He did it for the second time yesterday in the Golden Rod purse, a dash at 5 furlongs. He made a show of the juveniles who attempted to fight it out with him. He led while passing the stands for the first time by three lengths. He pulled away into a lead of five lengths going down the back stretch.

Eight Lengths in Front.

Heading into the stretch he was eight lengths to the good. The issue, of course, was all over, so Jocky Dupre eased him up. Still Rickey Roo won by three lengths. Bar Play had raced second all the way. He made up some ground in the last furlong. Brilliant Duke took down third money.

Rickey Roo ran the 5 furlongs in 1:01 3-5 and from the way he stepped in this number he gives evidence of being able to beat any juvenile quartered in Chicago.

Favorites Gallop In.

Favorites rolled home nearly all afternoon. The program opened when Guilder galloped in at $3.20. Jocky Longden was in the saddle and he had Guilder far out in front throughout the journey. When he dashed past the finish line he was four lengths in front, with Dark Entry second and Tufinuf third.

In the third race Wise Eddie and his jocky, R. Tilden, laughed back at their rivals all the way around the 6½ furlong whizz. Wise Eddie paid $4.06.

The seven furlong fourth race was sort of a wide open betting affair, but Dutchy mustered just about as many backers as any of the others and with Jocky Dupre in the saddle he romped up into the lead on the last trip down the back stretch to win easily from Traggat and Gold Rose. Dutchy paid off at $7.86.

IOWA STATE AND IOWA TO BATTLE TODAY AT AMES

Ames, Ia., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—A turnout of 20,000 is expected here tomorrow for the football game between Coach Robert Veenker's undefeated Iowa State college team, and the husky delegation from the University of Iowa.

While the university eleven is the favorite in the twenty-fourth encounter between the Iowa schools, the Hawkeye defeat by Nebraska last week has injected confidence into the Cyclone team.

Iowa State Strong.

The Iowa State team is regarded as the best in recent years. It defeated Luther and Grinnell by large margins and displayed a dangerous running and passing threat last week to upset Missouri, 13 to 0.

Bill Allender, veteran full back, and Tommy Neal, speedy sophomore half back, probably will be the chief running threats for the home team. If an aerial attack is used extensively, Frank Hood, 205 pound senior end, is likely to be on the receiving end.

Hope to Stop Simmons.

The Cyclone defense has been drilled this week to stop Dick Crayne, full back, and Oze Simmons, Negro half back, ace ball carriers of the university team.

Lineups:

OHIO STATE VS. COLGATE

Columbus, O., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Ohio State will step out of the Western conference tomorrow to take on Colgate in one of the outstanding intersectional battles of the day. The game marks the second meeting between the two schools, the first resulting in a 23 to 23 tie in 1923.

The Buckeyes are given a slight edge in pregame figures, but two Ohio back field regulars may be out of the lineup with leg injuries.

The probable starting lineups:

N. U. FACES FROSH

Progress made in Northwestern's rehabilitation program will be put to a test today when the varsity meets the freshmen in a regulation game at Dyche stadium. An admission of 25 cents will be charged, the proceeds of which will be used to help send the band to the Michigan game.

Coach Dick Hanley will use the game to further experiment with new players in various positions. Most pronounced of the lineup changes will find George Potter at full back, while Bob Schwartz, 160 pound sophomore, will be at quarter back. The latter's blocking has earned him a trial in the starting back field. Potter will call signals from full back.

All varsity players will get an opportunity to perform in today's game, with the exception of those on the injured list.

MARQUETTE WINS FROM CENTRE ON TWO LONG RUNS

Buivid Scores Twice in 19 to 6 Victory.

BY CHARLES NEVADA.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 19.—Marquette university upheld its eminently successful record against football teams from the south by defeating Centre college of Danville, Ky., tonight, 19 to 6. Two long runs by Ray Buivid, back field star, produced the touchdowns that made the difference in the score. The attendance was 12,000.

Buivid swung into action after Marquette's second team, which started the game, was stopped cold by the Colonels. His first touchdown scamper was for 25 yards. His second, the longest of the season here, measured 77 yards. Buivid also collaborated on the last score when he rifled a pass to Cuff, who ran a short distance to the goal.

3 BEAR REGULARS INJURED; OUT OF CINCINNATI GAME

Four games against National league opponents in the last 13 days began taking their toll among the Bears yesterday, when three regulars and a reserve were definitly eliminated from the starting lineup against the Cincinnati Reds in tomorrow's ladies' day game at Wrigley field.

Johnny Sisk's leg injury, sustained in the Green Bay game at Milwaukee Wednesday night, is more serious than preliminary diagnosis revealed. Coach George Halas said yesterday Sisk would be out for several weeks.

Regulars who will be lost for at least a week, according to Halas, are Gene Ronzani, half back; Bill Karr, end, and George Musso, tackle. Ronzani and Karr have leg injuries and Musso was severely bruised in the Packer game.

The Cardinals, who followed the Bears to Wrigley field yesterday, also curtailed practice, eliminating scrimmage for the first time this week. A short drill today will wind up the team's preparation for its game with the Packers at Green Bay tomorrow.

For the first time this season the Cardinals will enter a game at full strength. The first string back field of Homer Griffith, Southern California, and Dave Cook, Illinois, half backs; Mike Mikulak, Oregon, full back, and Paul Pardonner, Purdue, quarter back, will make its first start of the year.

Michigan Will Try to Get 1st Score Today

cago, 27 to 0. Such a sorry sequence is almost beyond memory, and the coaching staf at Ann Arbor admits it knows not what the morrow will bring.

If Michigan supporters were the crying type, which they are not, they are well equipped with material for much plain and fancy wailing. Just to enumerate a few salient reasons for a Wolverine dirge:

1. There are the two defeats by Michigan State and Chicago. The State victory was its first over Michigan since before the war. The Maroon defeat was the worst since the war, barring the Grange catastrophe at Illinois in 1924.

2. Bill Renner, one of the best pitchers in the conference, hasn't played a minute, due to a broken bone in his ankle, suffered in early practice

Punt Loses Potency.

3. The punt, one of Michigan's favorite weapons, has lost its potency. John Regeczi, the Muskegon back who was the ablest kicker in the conference last year, has been hampered by a bad knee.

4. Willard Hildebrand, guard, suffered a cleat gash in practice from which he hasn't recovered, and Mike Savage, end, is still bothered with the effects of a sprained ankle, suffered in the Chicago game.

In spite of all this woe, the student body is probably more wrought up about the team in a spiritual way than they have been in years. Time was, in the happy days of the Friedmans and the Oosterbaans and the Newmans when your Michigan student took a victory as the usual thing. Today they're out cheering themselves hoarse for the Wolverines.

The problem of starting Willis Ward, the colored end, against the southerners, still remained unsolved tonight, although it seemed a certainty that he would not play. Neither side has voiced any official opinion on the matter.

At least one student organization has waged a campaign to play Ward, and the Ann Arbor Ministerial association passed a resolution recently against any evidence of racial discrimination.

Tuskegee and Wilberforce Meet Today

Football teams of Wilberforce university of Ohio and Tuskegee college of Alabama concluded workouts yesterday afternoon for their game at Soldiers' field this afternoon. Cleve Abbott, Tuskegee coach, said after the drill that his men were fit and ready for a hard battle. Country Lewis, coach of the Ohio eleven, was just as confident as he talked of his team's chances.

However, each team has a problem. Tuskegee on how to stop Caesar Junius, half back, and Wilberforce will have to halt Jack Knight, Tuskegee star.

Jack Hart, Chicago, who was injured in practice, may be able to play today. He is one of the best men on the Ohio team and his return to the game will give the Green Wave considerable confidence.

Today's game marks the sixth meeting of the two teams; each has won once, the other three being ties. The lineup:

New York, Oct. 19.—[Special.]—The tone of the bond market of the New York Stock exchange today was somewhat better, but activity was moderately less than in the previous session. Transactions totaled $10,232,000, compared with $11,400,000 on Thursday.

United States government obligations were moderately better, although sales were only $2,881,700 against $3,485,500 on Thursday. At the close advances of 1-32d to 5-32ds of a point were in the majority. Treasury 3¼s of 1944-'46, the maturity into which the recently redeemed Liberty fourth 4¼s was converted, were the most active and held the day's largest gain.

HOLC Bonds Firmer.

Two of the Home Owners' Loan issues were up 2-32ds each, one was unchanged, and Federal Farm Mortgage 3s eased 1-32d while the 3¼s were up as much. Some of the Treasuries and Liberties yielded 1-32d to 4-32ds. Followers of the federals were still somewhat hesitant pending announcement of the terms on which a banking syndicate will float $50,000,000 more Home Owners' Loan corporation bonds.

Among the corporation groups, Armour & Co. 4½s and 5½s edged up to 101⅞ and 99¼ respectively, new highs for the year. Shell Union Oil 5s, with warrants, which have been called for Nov. 19, also advanced fractionally to 102½, a new 1934 peak. The call price is 102.

Other Firm Spots.

Other firm spots included Interboro Rapid Transit 6s, up 2⅝; Inland Steel 4½s, up 1; McCrory Store 5½s, up 2½; and Wheeling Steel 4½s, up 2½. An easier tone was displayed by some issue of Union Pacific, Paramount, N. Y. Central, International Telephone, Great Northern, Cleveland Union Terminal, St. Paul, Chicago and North Western, Chesapeake and Ohio, and Baltimore and Ohio.

German obligations were a trifle irregular, but bonds of Mexico, Poland, Australia, and Austria firmed.

U. S. Industrial Alcohol.

Answer: This company is closely affiliated with Air Reduction company. It is the leading producer of industrial ethyl alcohol. Annual capacity is about 35 million gallons. It furnishes about 35 per cent of total domestic consumption.

The company stepped out of the potable liquor industry in 1934 when it transferred its shares in Penn-Maryland, Inc., to National Distillers Products corporation, for which it received 138,000 shares of the latter's common stock.

About 40 per cent of sales of ethyl alcohol is for use as an anti-freeze agent for automobiles. Weather conditions are an important factor in determining sales. Remainder of output is sold for diverse purposes.

Net income for the first half of 1934 was $353,000, or 90 cents a share. Had profit on disposal of the Penn-Maryland interest been included net would have been $957,000, or $2.45 a share. For the first half of 1933 net income was $299,000, or 80 cents a share.

Net income for 1933 was $1,393,000, or $3.56 per share, against net income of $176,000, or 47 cents a share, for 1932. Losses of $1,834,000 and $1,895,000 were sustained in 1931 and in 1930, but a net income of $4,721,000, or $12.63 a share, was reported for 1929.

On Dec. 31, 1933, current assets, including $1,973,000 cash, totaled $9,563,000 and current liabilities were $1,363,000. A contingency reserve of $1,719,000 was included among liabilities. The company is defending a suit in which the federal government is seeking to collect $8,141,000 taxes. Total assets of the company were only $13,608,000.

Capitalization consists solely of 391,033 shares of no par common, on which nothing has been paid since May, 1931, although a distribution of National Distillers Products stock to stockholders is being considered.

More Information, Please.

Investors' Guide: I have 50 shares of capital stock, $10 par. These are incorporated under the laws of Ohio, Dayton, May 11, 1912. Please tell me what you can about the stock. I remain your inquiring friend.—B. O. W.

Answer: Unless you furnish us with the name of the company whose stock you hold we cannot furnish you with any information on it. On receipt of the corporate name of the issuer we shall be glad to check and see what if any data concerning it are available.

TREASURY WILL FIGHT AGAINST CENTRAL BANK

Revamped Reserve System Favored.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—(AP)—The administration is preparing to combat in the next congress an expected effort to establish a central bank or central monetary authority.

Treasury officials were revealed today to have considered the idea themselves for several months. They marshaled a group of economists to investigate its possibilities. Now, however, it has been decided that whatever beneficial results such an institution would produce could be obtained by a little more revamping of the federal reserve system.

The primary purpose of a central bank is to provide in a branch of the government a unified control over credit and the issuance of currency. Recent banking legislation, it was held, had largely concentrated this power in the dreasury and the federal reserve board.

Want Grip on Reserve Banks.

For the future, two new steps now are regarded with favor. One would give President Roosevelt authority to name the governors of the various reserve banks. Another would establish a committee answerable to the reserve board to take charge of the purchase and sale of government bonds by the banks of the system.

The reserve board now has no supervisory power over such transactions, which are aimed at controling the general volume of credit. The existing situation, officials believe, holds possibilities of individual reserve bank policies running counter to the purposes of the administration.

Commercial banks hold well over 50 per cent of all outstanding government bonds. The theory is that if the reserve banks buy quantities of these bonds in times of credit stringency the commercial banks will find their interest bearing securities replaced by cash which must be loaned if it is to yield a profit.

Regarded as Good Method.

Despite the indifferent success which has attended the reserve system's previous efforts in this direction, it is still considered a potent method of controling credit, especially in times of overexpansion and too plentiful credit. Then, by selling the bonds held by the reserve banks, the amount of cash available to commercial banks for lending purposes is reduced and, theoretically at least, the government exercises some measure of control over a runaway business boom which threatens to end in collapse.

As part of an effort to provide credit, the reserve banks bought nearly a billion dollars of government bonds a year ago. The commercial banks, however, did not use the money for lending, but let it accumulate in their noninterest bearing excess reserve accounts, which grew in proportion to the reserve bank bond purchases.

Currency Issue Scattered.

Authority to issue currency is now scattered, but, in the main, rests with the reserve banks and the treasury. The only exception is the power of the national banks to issue national bank notes. Administration officials regard this a comparatively negligible factor in general control of the currency.

An alternative to presidential appointment of reserve bank governors, now under consideration, would give the reserve board, appointted by the President, power to confirm or reject the governors elected in the usual way. They are now chosen by the boards of directors of the various reserve banks, who in turn are elected by the stockholders, which are the member banks.

Under the present system a reserve bank could name a governor, administration officials say, who by opposition and refusal to cooperate could nullify governmental efforts at unified banking and currency policy.

Car Loadings Higher; Still Below 1933

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Loadings of revenue freight turned upward again last week, according to the weekly summary of the Association of American Railroads issued today. Car loadings for the week ended Oct. 13 totaled 635,639, an increase of 4,321 over the preceding week.

This increase was of about seasonal proportions but was somewhat less than had been predicted in the earlier forecasts. Moreover, the total was 35,041 cars below the figure for the corresponding week in 1933. Fuel fell more than 13,000 cars under a year ago, ore loadings were almost 16,000 cars lower and less than carload merchandise shipments were off more than 10,000 cars.

Miscellaneous Freight Gains.

Merchandise in less than carload lots totaled 161,451 cars, a decrease of 3,539 below the preceding week and 10,629 below the corresponding week in 1933.

PACKARD MOTOR PLANS TO SPEND $6,500,000 ON PLANT EXPANSION

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Approximately $6,500,000 is to be spent immediately by the Packard Motor Car company in reorganization and development of plant facilities in preparation for materially increased operations in 1935, according to official announcement made today.

The major portion of the expenditure will be in connection with the new line of lower priced cars to be brought out in the near future. By the end of the year $3,500,000 will have been spent for tooling, $1,200,000 for engineering, $1,000,000 for machinery and equipment, and $500,000 for plant rearrangement.

Provision has been made for charging against operations all costs which are not properly capital expenditures. All told, operations this year will be called upon to absorb around $5,000,000 of the total expenses in connection with the development program.

These extraordinary charges will be reflected in the report for quarter ended Sept. 30, 1934, which is expected to show a net loss of around $2,400,000, compared with net profit of $622,786 after taxes, depreciation, etc., in the September quarter of 1933. Indicated net loss for the first nine months of 1934 is $5,368,000, compared with a net loss of $487,084 in first nine months of 1933. Cash and marketable securities Sept. 30, 1934, totaled $13,000,000, compared with $15,114,017 a year earlier.

RYERSON & SON PAYS 25 CENTS; SALES LARGER

Joseph T. Ryerson & Son, Inc., yesterday declared a dividend of 25 cents a share, payable Nov. 1 to stock of record Oct. 25. A similar payment was made on Aug. 1, although there is no definite rate on the stock.

Sales during the first nine months of the year were considerably in excess of those during the corresponding period of 1933, Edward L. Ryerson Jr., president, stated. He also reported improvement in sales for the current month with good indications of increased business during the last quarter of the year.

Gasoline War Spreads East; Chicago Lull

The Standard Oil Company of Indiana, however, announced a reduction of 3-10 of a cent in tank wagon and service station prices throughout its entire territory where normal prices still prevail. This will not affect the Chicago quotations or those at other points where the major companies and independents have been engaged in a struggle.

The reduction is classed as an adjustment to meet general competition caused by the prevailing low tank car prices. Other major companies expect to follow.

A large number of points, untouched by the price war, will be affected throughout Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Kansas, Missouri, and Oklahoma.

L. M. Foster, president of the Chicago Individual Branded Petroleum association, said that his organization is seeking to prevent certain promiscuous price cutting and to maintain the same level as that of the major companies pending word from Secretary of the Interior Ickes, oil administrator.

A cut of ½ cent at Baltimore was announced yesterday by the Standard Oil of New Jersey, making the service station price 13½ cents, including 5 cents in taxes. A subsidiary, Standard of Louisiana, cut half a cent at Knoxville, Tenn., to 10 cents plus taxes. In Philadelphia, the Atlantic Refining company met Socony-Vacuum's slash of 1 to 1½ cents and extended the new price of 11½ cents plus tax through Pennsylvania and Delaware. Sinclair reduced 2½ cents in Philadelphia to meet prices.

From New York it was reported that one small dealer in the Camden district was selling gasoline at 2½ cents a gallon plus taxes.

BUYERS' ADDRESSES PAINTED ON HOGS IN RAIL PICKUP SERVICE

Topeka, Kas., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Hogs, in lots of one or more and with buyers' addresses painted on them, are being shipped to market from a test territory in Kansas under a plan devised by the Santa Fe railroad.

Under the plan two stock cars leave Superior, Neb., on a local freight every Monday to pick up hogs for shipment to Kansas City or Wichita, Kas. A shipper is privileged to send one or more hogs at the carload rate, actual weight. At every station along the route from Superior to Strong City are cans or paint and farmers mark their hogs.

R. G. Merrick, assistant freight trafic manager, said on the first day no hogs were picked up. On the second six hogs were shipped and by the fifth there were 46 hogs shipped under the plan.

COURT BLAMES NRA IN ACTION OVER BLUE EAGLE

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Describing the attitude of the NRA as "wholly one of noncoöperation with the court," Federal Judge William C. Coleman today refused to dismiss his own order of July 24 last restraining NRA officials from removing the Blue Eagle from the clothing plants of L. Greif & Bros., Inc. Attorney representing both the government and the company had asked for dismissal of the order on the ground that an agreement had been reached.

Judge Coleman said he would not sign such an order until representatives of the National Recovery Administration had appeared in court as responsible parties to the agreement. He admitted that the NRA itself was outside the jurisdiction of the United States District court here, but insisted that in seeking the dismissal, the NRA must be represented as a party to the agreement.

30 HOUR WEEK WON'T WORK, ASSERTS SWOPE

Would Lower Living Standard, He Says.

Saddling all industry with a thirty hour week and corresponding wage increases is an "utter impracticability," Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric company told the National Electrical Manufacturers' association last night at its annual convention in the Palmer house.

Such a program would defeat its own objects of more employment and better living conditions, Mr. Swope declared. He charted the effects of such rigid limitation to demonstrate that it wouldn't work.

"The only way, it seems to me, that a decrease in hours and increase in wage rate can be accomplished is by new inventions and better methods, so that lower costs will be arrived at, which lower costs may be quite consistent with higher earnings per week for those employed," he said. "Such lower costs will be reflected in lower selling prices, which will tend toward a greater consumption, better standard of living, and maintaining our increased employment."

Part of Profits Go to Labor.

Mr. Swope stated that profits from invention and better methods have not gone to capital alone in the past, but in large part to labor through shorter working days and weeks, higher earnings, and lower selling prices.

"One wishes that it could be done as simply," said Mr. Swope, referring to the resolution of the American Federation of Labor advocating a uniform 30 hour week and wage increases.

Increased employment through the spreading of work would be only temporary, he pointed out. Without improved methods and greater production per employé, the cost of goods would increase, and higher prices would result because profits would be insufficient to bear the added cost.

Price Rise Cuts Use.

"It has been demonstrated again and again," pursued Mr. Swope, "that with increased selling prices consumption is restricted, and vice versa, with lowered selling prices consumption is immediately increased." A drop in consumption, he added, means a lower standard of living for those unable to buy, as well as decreased production.

"Lessened production means fewer people employed, so we would be back to conditions even worse than they are today, thus defeating the whole object which we all have as our goal; that is, greater enjoyment and the larger employé earnings that are justified by conditions in each industry."

John S. Tritle, retiring president of the electrical group, last night was presented with the James H. McGraw award for contributing most during the year to the advancement of the manufacturing branch of the industry.

Gold Nations Prepare Plan for Trade Ring

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

BRUSSELS, Oct. 19.—The gold bloc countries opened their conference here today in an atmosphere of good will and hope, but with the full consciousness that the task before them was formidable and that they were not any too well prepared to meet it.

Nevertheless, encouraged by France's sudden determination to lend strong support, by Poland's last minute decision to join the discussions and by the common recognition that something must be done to break the vicious circle of high prices and reduced business from which the gold group is suffering, the delegates are not likely to go away from Brussels tomorrow empty handed.

Have Three Plans.

Three plans for the expansion of trade, of tourist travel, and of transportation within the group were offered today by France, Belgium, and Italy. They are being molded overnight into one project, and on this the conference will vote tomorrow. Whatever form this plan takes it will necessarily be expressed in general terms.

The feeling was generally prevalent today that the French plan would be the one accepted, for the reason that France will have to make all the sacrifices if this conference is to be a success. France is the only big market in the whole group.

All the others must export to live, which means that they must export to France. This explains France's reluctance until very recently to take active part in the discussions and the strong opposition to them that still obtains in France, particularly among the agriculturalists.

Would Eventually Gain.

However, it is felt that in the long run France will gain by strengthening the economic structure of the gold bloc, preserving her monetary basis and eventually increasing her foreign trade. Moreover, the important political consideration of binding these states closely to France through economic ties is well calculated to convince the Quai d'Orsay that some sacrifices would not be in vain.

Whatever decision is made it will entail a gradual unfolding and it is felt that there will be time enough to back down if events do not work out as the French hope. The entire group in any case is acting on the principle that any loosening of trade restrictions and any increase in their exchanges, however modest, will be welcomed, particularly as these may prove an opening wedge to many important results.

CHICAGO BANKS INCREASE LOANS IN LAST QUARTER

Reverse Trend Since Last Fall.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Bank credit in Chicago during the three months ended Sept. 29 expanded for the first time in a year, according to quarterly figures released by state and national banks yesterday.

State bank reports were published in response to the quarterly bank call issued by State Auditor Edward J. Barrett. There was no call for national bank figures by Controler of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor, but all national banks in the city submitted their figures voluntarily. Laws require national bank calls not oftener than three times a year, but state banks must report each quarter.

The expansion of bank loans in Chicago, although not very large, reverses a downward trend that had been in progress ever since last fall. Total loans outstanding on Sept. 29 were 623 million dollars, compared with 594 millions on June 30, 1934, which was the lowest point reached since the beginning of the depression.

Continental Loans Decline.

The only big loop bank that failed to increase its loans was the Continental Illinois National bank, whose chairman, Walter J. Cummings, was put in charge of the bank through the efforts of the present Democratic administration at Washington after the Reconstruction Finance corporation had got control through the purchase of 50 million dollars of preferred stock.

The Continental's loans dropped from 259 millions to 251 millions, despite a 30 million dollar increase in its total deposits. Loans of the First National increased 16 millions and its deposits were up 35 millions.

Among the state banks the Northern Trust reported another 10 per cent increase in deposits to reach a new all time high of 242 millions, while loans rose 5 millions. The Harris Trust gained 9 millions in deposits and lions.

Total Deposits Rise 10 Per Cent.

Total deposits of all Chicago banks rose about 10 per cent in the three months ended Sept. 29, thus continuing the steady growth that has been in progress since the reopening of banks after the nation-wide bank moratorium in March, 1933. Chicago bank deposits are now back to 1931 levels.

Despite the last five years of depression and the closing and liquidation of scores of banks deposits in Chicago now are approximately 400 million dollars greater than deposits in 1920. Total deposits of 2 billion, 205 millions on Sept. 29 compare with the peak of 2 billion 942 millions on Dec. 31, 1928, and with 1 billion, 807 millions on Nov. 15, 1920.

Savings deposits alone increased about 17 millions during the last quarter, the total for all Chicago banks on Sept. 29 being 374 millions, compared with 357 millions three months earlier.

Despite the increase in loans Chicago banks were able to raise their cash resources from 744 millions on June 30 to 791 millions on Sept. 29.

CHICAGO RESERVE INDUSTRY LOANS RISE SHARPLY

The seventh federal reserve district, centered at Chicago, paid out more money in direct loans to industry last week than during the entire time that federal experiment has been under way in an effort to expand credit of the country.

The total paid out of the local bank now stands at $459,400. This means loans of approximately $260,000 were made in the last seven days, Gov. George Schaller said yesterday after the weekly meeting of the reserve executive committee.

Applications given tentative approval by the advisory committee now total more than $3,000,000, according to Chairman Max Epstein, head of the General American Transportation corporation.

BROKERS ASSAIL WASH SALES OF INSULL AGENT

Members and officials of the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday deplored the transactions detailed Thursday from the witness stand in the Insull trial by J. D. Scheinman, one of their former associates. They said they had not thought one of the number would be guilty of "wash sales" [fictitious transactions in which stock ownership does not change hands and which are contrar yto rules on all exchanges]. All agreed, however, that it is "water over the dam," since Scheinman no longer is a member subject to punishment by the exchange.

At the same time a few brokers advanced the previously spoken opinion that the alleged Insull market rigging operations were no different than present efforts of the federal terasury to sustain quotations on government bonds.

Leland Neeves, attorney for the exchange, offered an opinion that Scheinman's testimony of two accounts in his office to buy and sell the same stock to make a market for Corporation Securities and Insull Utility Investment shares did not make him subject to criminal action. This would be possible only if the dealings were made part of a conspiracy case, he said.

Insull, Son & Co. Trustee Sues Middle West Utilities

A suit to recover stock subscription and interest losses from the Middle West Utilities company was filed in Circuit court yesterday by Harry A. Bigelow, trustee in bankruptcy of Insull, Son & Co. The suit asks $3,814.96 plus interest at 5 per cent from Feb. 25, 1932, as actual losses sustained in a stock subscription of $25,000. The suit is similar to a number of others growing out of subscription contracts made between Insull, Son & Co. and other former Insull concerns.

STOCK TRADING DWINDLES AND PRICES DECLINE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 19.—There was little change in the stock market picture today. Prices continued to drift lower, with most traders holding aloof pending some development calculated to influence the course of speculative activity. Volume barely exceeded a half million shares.

Week-end reports from business centers were a bit more encouraging, particularly those on retail trade, but they were ignored in the popular pastime of looking to Washington for a signal to renewed speculation. A report that President Roosevelt was piecing together a huge public works and relief program for submission to congress in January excited some interest about the boardrooms, but had no appreciable effect on sentiment. A better than seasonal improvement in railroad trafic was likewise a dide as a market factor.

Market Near Stalemate.

Brokerage house commentators agreed that the market had reached something approximating a stalemate and that no great change in the situation could be expected until some new prime or "scare" is forthcoming.

As on preceding days of the present calm, group movements offered little of interest during the day. Silver issues were under some pressure in the earlier trading. United States Smelting declining about two points, but the group firmed up later.

Oil shares continued heavy on further price slashing in the gasoline price war now raging, but the group as a whole showed up no worse at the close than did most other sections.

Most of the industrial leaders found difficulty in keeping afloat. American Can lost about a point at the start and never could regain it. United States Steel, Westinghouse, General Motors, and Consolidated Gas were slightly lower most of the time.

Packing Shares Prominent.

The packing house section was again prominent, but the gains were not so pronounced as those of yesterday. Government estimates of higher meat prices in the not too distant future are making the meat shares attractive to an increasing number of speculators.

Some of the alcohol shares were favored with an occasional buying order. The sponsors of U. S. Industrial Alcohol, recently the subject of that brokerage house comment and Wall street dope that in olden times heralded the approach of some stage of pool operation, seemed to be meeting with some success. At any rate the stock jumped about a point and a half but later had to give up most of its gain.

Wrigley Company Earnings Are Larger Than Last Year

Net income of William Wrigley Jr. company for the third quarter of 1934 was $2,183,571, or $1.09 per share on the two million shares outstanding. This brought net for the first nine months of this year to $6,063,115, or $3.03 per share. For the third quarter of 1933 net income was $2,055,614, and for the first nine months, $5,949,542.

EGGS DROP 1-8 TO 1-4 CENT; BUTTER STEADY TO HIGHER

Moderate selling at the close caused a decline of ⅛ to ¼ cent per dozen in egg futures on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday. Butter closed unchanged to ⅛ cent per pound higher. Potatoes advanced another 5 points per 100 pounds.

Egg receipts were again light and the four markets took out nearly 1,000 cases more than last year.

Butter withdrawals totaled 457,000 pounds more than last year, but the mild weather also influenced buyers in this commodity.

Cash potatoes held steady and buying in the October futures contract was encouraged. January was bid up 2 points, with sellers asking higher.

GRAINS LOWER; WHEAT DROPS BELOW DOLLAR

Selling Light, but Buyers Are Apathetic.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

A decline of about a cent a bushel took place yesterday in all wheat and corn futures on the Chicago Board of Trade. The market had no heavy burden of selling to bear and the price concessions were the result of the almost complete apathy of buyers.

The decline was enough to pull all wheat futures below a dollar a bushel. December wheat closed at 98⅞ cents a bushel and net losses on the various contracts were ⅞ to 1⅛ cents. The quotations on corn were whittled down ⅞ to 1 cent, with 77 cents quoted for the December delivery when trading ended. Losses ranged up to a cent in oats and 1⅝ cents in rye futures.

Foreign Decline Chief Factor.

The conditions underlying the market which might be counted on to buoy up prices, such as the premiums existing in the cash grain market, the known shortages and the declining stocks in the terminal markets, were impotent in the face of the decline in prices in the foreign markets. The close adjustment—at least at the present time—between wheat prices here and in Liverpool is brought out in the daily fluctuations in the two markets.

Practically all the domestic factors affecting the grain market are bullish if one does not consider possible intervention by the government. The world situation is also considered bullish, although there are certain unsettling factors in the situation at the moment. In the face of this, however, wheat prices in Chicago indicate an inability to rise without a similar movement in foreign prices.

Wheat futures here are quoted up to 25 cents a bushel over Liverpool prices, but nearly every movement up or down in the British market is matched by the quotations in Chicago.

The United States is out of the market so far as exports are concerned this season. The reserve bins will be dipped into in order to fill domestic wheat requirements and the country will be lucky if enough feed grains can be scraped up to carry it through until the next crops are available for use. At the present the pinch is not felt very much. Winter wheat is providing pasture and only the advent of cold weather is likely to bring home the realities of the feed situation. Statistics purporting to show the situation leave the market cold for the most part.

SEPTEMBER NEW BUILDING BELOW AUGUST AND 1933

New York, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Building contracts let in September declined moderately from the volume of August and the same month last year, the F. W. Dodge corporation reported today.

New construction projects started in the 37 states east of the Rockies reached a September total of $110,219,200, down 8 per cent from August and a year ago.

Public works, with increased highway construction, showed an increase over August, but other types of building operations were on a smaller scale. Residential building contracts awarded during the month totaled $17,871,600, against $18,641,000 for August and $21,549,000 for September last year. Nonresidential building amounted to $42,359,300, compared with $50,816,900 for the preceding month and $37,836,300 for September, 1933. The public works contracts came to $43,478,500, against $41,905,900 in August.

U. S. WILL FOUND 12 COMMUNITIES FOR DESTITUTE

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Three million dollars or thereabouts in federal relief funds was set aside today for immediate construction of 12 rural industrial communities in which homes and farms will be leased to destitute families on relief rolls.

Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator, told newspaper men his plans and said the day of cheaper housing was coming "damned soon." He said plans had been drawn for 50 communities, but that all of the projects would not be authorized at this time.

Hopkins said the 12 communities would range in size from 150 to 700 homes. These are to be occupied by stranded industrial families; families transplanted from submarginal farm land purchased by the government, and families on city relief rolls who have "agricultural background."

Buyers Express Confidence in Real Estate Market

Fifty per cent of the recent buyers of Chicago properties bought homes because they believed in home ownership rather than renting, according to a survey just completed by the Chicago Real Estate board. Thirty-seven and a half per cent expressed confidence in the present real estate market. Seven and a half per cent said that business conditions are better and they expect a future active market. The remainder, 5 per cent, bought

FACTORY JOBS FALL TO 1931 LEVEL, DUE MAINLY TO STRIKES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—Factory employment slumped to about its 1931 level during last month largely because of workers out on strike, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins disclosed today.

Declines in employment and pay rolls during September are unusual, Miss Perkins admitted. The month ordinarily sees the beginning of the fall upswing. "Labor disturbances," of which the giant textile strike was most important, were her explanation for this year's slump.

Factory employment, exclusive of nonindustrial employment, fell 4.7 per cent between August and September, Secretary Perkins reported. Pay rolls dropped 6.8 per cent during the same period.

Despite the downward trend during September Secretary Perkins was inclined to be optimistic over facts disclosed by the report. Had the textile strike not been in full swing, she said, employment in both industrial and nonindustrial businesses would actually have gained during September.

Secretary Perkins also pointed out that big employment gains were reported throughout the retail businesses, saying that this was further evidence that retail trade was good throughout the country.

Secretary of Interior Ickes announced yesterday that a 2 billion dollar housing program may be requested of congress. The President himself has said that the government's housing activities will be expanded.

SEEK TO CREATE BROADER MARKET FOR HOLC BONDS

Official announcement of an offering of $50,000,000 Home Owners' Loan corporation 3 per cent bonds by a syndicate of investment bankers, headed by Field, Glore & Co. of New York and Chicago, was issued yesterday.

"It is expected that the first block to be placed on the market will approximate $50,000,000," the bankers said. "Its main purpose, it is understood, is to create a broader market for the bonds than now exists, due to the fact that the investing public has not yet become familiar with this new type of government obligation."

The bonds will be guaranteed both as to principal and interest by the United States government. The proceeds of the loan will be used by HOLC to make necessary cash payments on refinancing loans. Such payments usually amount to about 10 per cent of the loan and are for repairs, past due taxes, appraisal fees, etc.

The corporation is limited to the issue of 3 billion dollars. Loans made so far exceed 1,700 million dollars.

The offering syndicate is expected to include Brown, Harriman & Co., Inc., the First Boston corporation, Kidder, Peabody & Co., Lehman Brothers, J. & W. Seligman & Co., the Lee Higginson corporation, Bancamerica-Blair corporation, Hayden, Stone & Co., Blyth & Co., Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc., Goldman, Sachs & Co., White, Weld & Co., F. S. Moseley & Co., G. M. P. Murphy & Co., and Alexander Brown & Sons of Baltimore.

DOLLAR HIGHER ON GOLD MONEYS; POUND ALSO UP

French francs fell 7⅛ points to 6.63⅜ cents, while the Dutch guilder was down 12 points to 68.18 cents, the Belgian belga down 4 points to 23.50 cents and the Swiss franc off 6 points to 32.82 cents. The Italian lira was off ½ point to 8.62½ cents and the German mark off 10 points, 40.50 cents.

The movement away from the gold-bloc currencies again flowed more strongly toward sterling than toward the dollar so that the former currency rose in dollar value by 1¼ cents to $4.95¼. Its satellites, the Scandanavian currencies gained 4 points, but the Japanese yen, which in the past used to follow sterling, continued its course of depreciation, inspired by the fall of China's currencies. The yen fell 5 points to 28.50 cents, a new low for this year.

CROP REDUCTION FORCES U. S. TO IMPORT GRAINS

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Crop reduction was carried so far this year by the drouth and by officials of the federal government who paid farmers not to produce that the nation now finds it necessary to transport grain for thousands of miles from foreign countries. Importations of oats and rye, for example, already are beginning to pour into this country over the tarif wall, bringing mixed results to farmers, depending upon whether they are buying or selling these two grains.

The Agricultural Adjustment administration's acreage reduction program has aided in forcing many farmers to buy feed for their live stock this winter. It is the opinion of some students in marketing that bringing oats and rye from foreign countries will be more beneficial than harmful to farmers because more of them will be buying than selling feed between now and the next cropping season.

Debate Effect on Prices.

The amount of oats and rye to be brought into this country during the next few months and the effect of these imports on domestic farm and terminal market prices is highly speculative. Market experts estimate that from 10 to 15 million bushels of oats and at least 11 million bushels of rye will be imported from foreign countries this year. Normally the United States exports oats.

Opinions differ as to the effect that imports of these two grains will have on prices. It is the view of some grain men that prices of oats on the farm may be forced down ½ cent to 5 cents a bushel, and they expect the price depressing influence to be somewhat greater in the domestic terminal markets. Rye imports are expected to have a retarding effect on the upward swing in both farm and terminal market prices on the short crop of this grain produced in the United States.

Importers Must Pay Duties.

Importers must pay a duty of 16 cents a bushel on oats and 15 cents a bushel on rye. Despite this tarif barrier foreign grains have been coming into this country during the last few weeks. Already approximately 1,500,000 bushels of oats and from five to six million bushels of rye produced in foreign fields have reached American shores to compete with home grown grains.

Importations of oats are coming mainly from the Argentine and rye is coming from Poland. There is a world shortage of grain crops, yet there seems to be plenty available in some foreign countries. Reports on the oat crop of 22 countries totals 2,160,000,000, against 2,613,000,000 bushels last year. Argentine growers have about 58,000,000 bushels, and half the crop is available for export. Farmers in the United States produced only 546,000,000 bushels, less than half a normal oat crop, according to government estimates. This year's rye crop produced in 26 countries that have reported totaled 865,000,000 bushels, compared with more than a billion bushels last year. Poland has 223,000,000 bushels of rye this year, compared with 278,000,000 in 1933.

U. S. BOARD WILL CHECK "HOT OIL" FLOW IN TEXAS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Taking its most drastic step in the campaign to curb the "hot oil" flow from the east Texas fields, the petroleum administrative board announced that a federal board would be set up in east Texas to issue tenders, or certificates of clearance, showing that oil is legally produced. No oil may be moved in interstate commerce without such certification. Appointment of the three members, probably Texas men, is expected within a day or two.

The administration's plan is to place on the producer the burden of proof that the oil he desires to ship has been legally produced. Under previous orders and regulations, the federal agents have had to assume this burden in establishing that oil, when found at its point of receipt, illegally produced.

The board's jurisdiction will be limited to the east Texas fields, where the export of illegal oil is estimated to have reached 125,000 barrels a day. The plan will be applied to any other fields where a comparable situation arises, it was said.

RETAIL BUYING RISES TO NEW PEAK SINCE 1931

New York, Oct. 19.—[Special.]—Seasonable weather, usually a harbinger of better business, played its part this week in promoting the most vigorous forward step of the fall season in general trade movements.

Reports from all sections of the country to Dun & Bradstreet today called attention to the sharp increases in retail distribution, especially pronounced in the farm areas where government funds are being distributed at a constantly enlarging rate.

These reports were accompanied by advices of the termination, at least temporarily, of labor difficulties, a quickening of industrial operations in some divisions, the maintenance of former employment totals and the noticeably easier financial conditions.

With the help of this contributing factor, retail sales for the country, as a whole, ranged from 8 to 12 per cent larger than for the corresponding week in 1933.

"As price increases do not form the heavy percentage in the dollar totals that was present during the spring season, the figures reveal that unit purchases are more numerous. The public generally is spending more liberally than at any time since 1931, as retail sales thus far this year have topped the 1933 figures by more than half a billion dollars."

CHINA LAUNCHES PLAN TO CONTROL MONEY, EXCHANGE

SHANGHAI, Oct. 19.—(AP)—China's exchange stabilization program was inaugurated today at a meeting of bankers and government officials presided over by H. H. Kung, minister of finance. Three major Chinese banks subscribed 100,000,000 Mex [about $50,000,000] for the exchange stabilization fund.

The conference was followed by the first session of the newly named equalization committee, which now is christened the foreign exchange stabilization committee to administer the fund and prevent violent fluctuation of silver and gold prices, as well as to fix foreign exchange rates in such a way as to prevent exploitation of the exchange. The committee is composed of the managers of subscribing banks of the Bank of China.

REORGANIZATION OF LAKE PARK BUILDING ASKED

Reorganization of the Lake Park Building corporation, 5017 Lake Park avenue, was asked yesterday by creditors in a petition filed under section 77B of the amended bankruptcy act. Assets of $150,000 and liabilities of $325,000 were listed in the bill.

Voluntary action was taken by the Genesee-Clayton Building corporation of Waukefan. Liabilities of $500,000 stand against the undermined value of the building.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—(AP)—SUGAR. Raw. Was quiet today. No sales were reported. The undertone was easy and store sugars were still available at last paid prices, or 2.89c, and it was believed that bids of a point or two less would have been accepted, but refiners showed no interest. Uncertainty over the disposal of the unsold Cuban quota and continued indifference of refiners in the spot market, caused rather sharp reactions in the futures market with final prices showing net losses of 1 to 3 points. Sales were 28,100 tons.

There was no change in refined prices with all refiners listing at 4.65c. Demand was limited to nearby requirements.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—(AP)—COFFEE—Prices were somewhat irregular today, responding to relatively small orders either way in a quiet market. Santos quotations held steady in sympathy with Brazilian markets and reassuring advices regarding regulation of coffee, but No. 7 deliveries eased under slight pressure.

Santos opened 2 to 7 points higher and closed 1 to 4 points higher. Sales, 5,000 bags. No. 7 opened 2 to 3 points lower and closed 4 to 6 points lower. Sales, 2,000 bags.

GARY ELECTRIC REPORTS LOSS DUE TO TAX RISE

The Gary Electric and Gas company and its operating subsidiary yesterday reported a combined total income in the quarter ended Sept. 30 exceeding that of a year ago, but added expenses offset the betterment.

As a result, the 1933 quarterly profit of $6,999 was changed into a deficit of more than $18,000 this year. The increase in federal taxes was largely responsible for the poorer showing, the company said.

For 12 months ended Sept. 30 net profit was $54,320 against a deficit of $278,177 in the previous year.

STATE MONEY HELD PREFERRED CLAIM ON BANK

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Tax money on deposit in defunct banks continue to be preferred claims, the Supreme court held today, despite the revised banking act.

William L. O'Connell, receiver for most of the banks being liquidated by the state auditor's office, had sought to have such deposits declared common claims, the issue being raised in a case originating in Ogle county over a deposit made in the State Savings bank of Oregon.

John J. Farrell, Ogle county collector, claimed preference for a county deposit of $143,425. O'Connell claimed that the revised banking act abrogated the common law prerogative of the state to have its claim set aside as preferred. The Ogle county Circuit court refused this claim, upholding the collector's contention.

AAA PROGRAM DRIVING AWAY FOREIGN BUYERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—Higher farm prices being forced by the AAA program are driving away foreign purchasers of farm products, department of agriculture reports indicated today.

The volume of farm exports has fallen this year compared with last year, the department announced. As measured by the department's index farm exports are 83 per cent of normal in this crop year compared with 85 per cent in the 1932-'33 crop year.

High farm prices, on the other hand, have caused the value of the farm exports to increase this year despite the slump in volume, the department said. Farm exports for the year ended June 30 were valued at 787 million dollars compared with 590 million dollars for the same period in 1932-'33.

Destroying Cotton Market.

Impartial observers have recently pointed out that the AAA program is destroying America's foreign market for cotton, her most important export crop, and the department today admitted that one of the chief reasons for the decline in farm exports is the slump in cotton shipments.

"Foreign countries took only 8,366,000 bales of cotton in 1933-'34 compared with 8,647,000 bales the year before," the department said. "Aided by better prices, however, the value of our 1933-'34 cotton exports was 438 million dollars, compared with 322 millions in 1932-'33. Thus, while the volume of the cotton exports declined 4 per cent the value increased 36 per cent.

"Exports of fresh apples in 1933-'34 approximated 4,086,000 barrels, compared with 4,585,000 barrels in 1932-'33. Fresh pear exports also declined. Exports of oranges and grapefruit showed a slight increase.

Wheat Exports Fall Sharply.

"Exports of wheat, including flour, continued to decline in 1933-'34 and aggregated 37,000,000 bushels—the smallest export movement since the late 1860's. Exports of rye, barley, corn, oats, oatmeal, and rice, including rice meal and flour, also continued to decline.

"There was also a continuation in the down trend in exports of lard, oil seeds and oil seed products. Cottonseed oil is the most important item in the latter group. The 1933-'34 exports of cottonseed oil totaled 23,000,000 pounds, compared with 44,000,000 pounds the year before. Exports of lard in 1933-'34 were 547 million pounds, compared with 560 million pounds the year before."

ROADS TAKE UP PLAN TO DIVIDE M. & ST. L. LINE

Study Suggestion Made by Head of RFC.

Executives of eight railway systems yesterday opened discussions of the practicability of buying the Minneapolis and St. Louis railroad, now in receivership, for division among them in line with the suggestion made last week by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Several committees of engineers and trafic experts were selected to make a detailed study of the proposal.

Drop Plan for RFC Loan.

Previous to the suggestion made by Chairman Jones, a reorganization committee of the Minneapolis and St. Louis road was working on a plan for reestablishment of the company through the aid of an RFC loan of $4,750,000. This effort has been abandoned, pending the outcome of the plan to partition the road among the other carriers in an area described as suffering from excessive competition.

J. W. Barriger, a representative of the RFC, offered the heads of the eight prospective buyers the data already assembled by the government agency yesterday. The conference was held in the office of Ralph Budd, president of the Burlington road.

Roads Involved in Deal.

Other railways represented and involved in the prospective deal, are the Rock Island, Illinois Central, North Western, Milwaukee, Great Northern, Wabash, and Chicago and Great Western.

"We don't know yet just what can be done," said Mr. Budd, "but we will find out what disposition of the Minneapolis and St. Louis property is possible to the benefit of railroads in general."

PRICES OF LARD FUTURES CLOSE STEADY TO HIGHER

Cash interests were fairly persistent buyers of lard futures yesterday to remove hedges against shipping sales. An early advance was followed by a recession, the weakness in grains becoming a factor toward the last and offsetting the strength in hogs. At the close prices were unchanged to 2½ cents per pound higher. Bellies were slightly easier, although quoted nominally unchanged for the day. Cash and loose lard was held at 9.45 cents and leaf at 9.50 cents while bellies were 13.37 cents per pound. Prices follow:

Note—Above prices include processing tax of 2.47c per pound on lard and 3.62c per pound on bellies levid on product made since March 1. Tax is rebated on product export, but varies according to the amounts due to the fact the tax was gradually advanced to present level.
